The Roosevelts To Greet Rulers Before Parade

Train Due at 11 o'Clock This Morning; 6,000 Service Men to Line Streets For 13-Minute Procession; 100,000 School Children to Join Huge Throng

By Hedley Donovan,
Post Staff Writer.

A third of the earth's peoples meet today in a symbolic handshake in Union Station.

Outside the terminal and beyond the reach of protocol, stretching in solid ranks to the White House, a vast, unofficial reception committee waits to shout the Nation's greeting to the sovereigns of the British Empire.

A democratic delegation of at least half a million will take up in its own language the refrain of silk-hatted dignitaries standing on the station's gold-bordered, blue carpeting.

Over a 2-mile route where the red, white and blue American and British flags ripple against a background of limestone, marble and green parkland, the greatest throng in Capital history will gather to welcome their guests, the King and Queen of England.

While diplomats weigh the meaning of a reigning British monarch's first visit to the United States, the District frankly confesses to feverish excitement over its most spectacular parade in years.

The blue and silver train which has carried the British rulers across Canada and back will glide into the District at 11 a. m., a few minutes after President Roosevelt and his entourage have arrived at the station from the White House.

Thirty minutes are allowed for ceremonies in the station, climaxed when the royal travelers step into the Plaza to the greetings of trumpets and artillery.

Tanks to Lead Parade

Led by Army tanks, the official cars will motor slowly up Delaware avenue to the Capitol, down Constitution to Pennsylvania and along the Avenue to the White House.

In the first open car will be President Roosevelt and the King, who will wear the 2-foot bearskin of his Guards regiment or the cocked hat of an Admiral of the Fleet. The Queen and her hostess will follow in another touring car.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada, Secretary of State Hull, top-ranking Government officials and leaders of the armed services will be seated in a dozen more machines. Caissons and Cavalry from Fort Myer will come after the motorcade.

Ten of the Army's new flying fortresses and 42 pursuit planes will roar their welcome overhead.

The escort route is to be lined by 6,000 fighting men—soldiers, sailors and marines. Facing the crowd across steel cables will be 1,468 white-gloved police and firemen. Secret Service agents, Scotland Yard inspectors, G-men and District plainclothesmen will mingle with the spectators.

The first thin cordon of spectators was expected to form along the Avenue within two hours after dawn. As 100,000 school children surge toward the parade route, instead of classrooms, second and third ranks will take shape. Government workers will pour out of Federal Triangle structures at 10 a. m.

With seven months of preparation nearing their climax, District authorities and police officials will cruise between solid walls of tense spectators during the final hour before the royal train is berthed in Union Station.

Parade to Last 13 Minutes

Timed to take 13 minutes in passing any given point, the parade will carry along the Avenue a climbing crescendo of excitement, a stirring and colorful overture to the 36-hour-and-30-minute visit the British rulers are paying the Capital.

While parade spectators return to normal pursuits—or begin maneuvering for position along another of the royal routes through Washington—the King and Queen will find the entire Diplomatic Corps drawn up to meet them in the White House.

The reception to the chiefs of missions will be followed by an informal luncheon, attended only by the sovereigns, the President and his wife, and members of the Roosevelt family.

Leaving behind dress uniform, precedence and all the trappings of a state visit, Their Majesties will slip out the southwest gate of the White

Rain or Shine, Embassy Fete To Be Jammed

While Washington in general puts on its best bib and tucker to welcome the first British monarchs ever to visit the Nation's Capital, wives of topflight officials and social notables have two outfits hanging ready to wear to the British Embassy fete this afternoon.

One type, probably a fluffy, flowing frock with a picture hat, will be donned in case the sun shines and promises to stay out. The other, a more tailored and darker ensemble, will be worn if lowering clouds suggest that no accessory would be more suitable than Prime Minister Chamberlain's umbrella. Alongside the rainy-weather outfit, in a number of cases there is a waterproof cape. But rain or shine, Washington women who have the chance to attend Their Majesties' tea party will be there. And promptly at 4 o'clock, too.

From then until 4:40 guests may enter the garden through the embassy. After that, they will have no choice but the garden gate, and that is likely to be jammed.

A select number of Capital celebrities have received from Lady Lindsay informal notes asking them to be at the door of the embassy not later than 4:30 o'clock to be escorted by an embassy attache up the winding marble stairway, through the magnificent hallways

Fair Weather Forecast for Parade of Royalty

Even if it rains for the royal garden party at the British Embassy today, not a drop will touch King George, Queen Elizabeth or members of Their Majesties' party.

The British Embassy said last night they were all set for a downpour, with several marquee tents to be erected if necessary.

This damp alternative was somewhat brightened by the weather man, who said there was possibility that the thundershower forecast for the afternoon would stay away until evening.

Whatever the prospect for the afternoon party thousands of Washington residents and visitors will have fair weather for their first sight of the British ruler and his Queen in the morning.

White House Tea Guest List Strictly Secret

British and Canadian Water to Wash Down All-American Dishes

By Hope Ridings Miller.

All-American meals, featuring such native dishes as corn pone and cranberry sauce, will be washed down with Canadian and British bottled water during Their Majesties' two-day stay at the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt revealed yesterday that two cases of water, one from the Thames River for tea-making, and the other from Canada, would be served to the royal couple during their sojourn in Washington (where its own aqua pura has been a source of civic pride since the turn of the century).

Choice food items and a wide variety of flowers from all over the United States have also been shipped here with the hope and prayer that they would appear on tables set for the first British monarch ever to be entertained at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue.

Such gifts, received hourly at the White House in the past few days, have played havoc with the tentative menus planned some time ago for the luncheon today and the dinner tonight at which Their Majesties will be honor guests.

Lewis and Corcoran Rumored; 'To Answer Any Royal Question'

Not who will eat strawberries with 1,400 other guests at the British Embassy this afternoon, but who will toss off a cup of tea with the King and Queen in a select group of 20 Administration and labor leaders at the White House tomorrow afternoon is the burning question in the Capital this morning.

The informal get-together for Their Majesties is the only unofficial appointment on a two-day calendar. According to Mrs. Roosevelt, all persons invited "can answer questions the King and Queen may want to ask."

But if she has her way about it, the guest list will remain as secret as the wine selections for Their Majesties' White House meals.

Meanwhile, rumors were going the rounds that both John L. Lewis and William Green had been asked, along with Thomas Corcoran and Ben Cohen, close advisers of the President and authors of much New Deal legislation; Col. Francis Harrington, WPA Administrator; Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, Assistant WPA Administrator; Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the women's division, Democratic National Committee; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board; Aubrey Williams, of the National Youth Administration, and a number of others

Sovereigns' Schedule

TODAY

11:00 a. m.—King George and Queen Elizabeth arrive at Union Station, where they will be escorted through a double line of Marines by the Secretary of State and the British Ambassador to be received by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Their suite will be presented to the Roosevelts and will be received by Government officials.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will escort the King and Queen to the military guard of honor, where military honors, including a salute of 21 guns, will be rendered. The entire party will then enter automobiles for a parade over the following route:

From the Plaza up Delaware avenue to the Capitol, turning at the Capitol down Constitution avenue to Pennsylvania

King to Embark With Pomp Of Nelson's Day

Traditional naval ceremonies, which originated in the British navy and date back to Nelson's day and beyond, will welcome King George and Queen Elizabeth aboard the U. S. S. Potomac tomorrow for a cruise to Mount Vernon with President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The King will be "piped aboard" the President's yacht with the aid of "side-boys" while the crew of the vessel "mans the rail" in the same manner as other dignitaries have been received on ships of the British and American navies for centuries. Nautical custom and tradition linger long and the honors paid by our naval vessels to visiting officials differ little from those of British frigates of the eighteenth century.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt will arrive at the Washington Navy Yard and board the Potomac ahead of the King and Queen—about 11:45 a. m. The President—for neither Mrs. Roosevelt nor Queen Elizabeth is included in the formal honors paid to the two government heads—will be greeted by the same ceremonies scheduled for His Majesty, except that he has asked that the gun salute be omitted.

Entering the main gate of the yard, the Presidential car will pass through a line of 700 sailors and

The Meeting at the Frontier

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Correspondent.

Suspension Bridge, N. Y., June 7.—King George VI of Great Britain and his lovely Queen stepped from their train at 9:35 o'clock tonight in the dingy little station here, first reigning monarchs of the mother country ever to visit her Lost Colonies.

They were definitely on their way to Washington and to the most lavish reception ever prepared there for any visitor since the first stone was piled upon another to build the Nation's Capital.

Here in the little station waited Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Mrs. Hull, who gave Their Majesties a welcome certainly as dignified if not as full of flash and color as that at Washington tomorrow. The King stepped first from the blue and silver royal train, onto a little red carpet just 9 by 14 feet, the smallest his shoes have yet touched on this tour. He was met first by Sir Ronald Lindsay, tall Ambassador of his Empire.

Sir Ronald presented Secretary Hull. Then came representatives of official America, including Michael J. McDermott, State Department press relations officer.

Hull Extends Official Greeting

Then Hull, in a conservative suit of blue serge, presented Mrs. Hull, who wore a powder blue ensemble. The Secretary of State presented members of his retinue and engaged in lively conversation with the King, Queen Elizabeth and Mrs. Hull chatted together at one side.

Secretary and Mrs. Hull both bowed and shook hands, Mrs. Hull foregoing the curtsey which has caused something of a teapot tempest in American social circles.

What the King and Hull said to each other was too subdued to be heard by reporters nearby. After talking a few moments, Secretary and Mrs. Hull walked with the Royal Couple to their train and boarded. At 10 p. m., the train steamed out toward the South and Washington.

A State Department spokesman said later that Secretary Hull greeted the royal visitors with these words:

"Your Majesties:

"In behalf of the Government and the people of the United States I have the honor and pleasure of extending to you our warmest welcome. All are delighted with your visit. The people of my country in the most genuine spirit of cordiality, hospitality and friendliness

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

If the President and the King take advantage of every possible minute, they can be alone together during the 36-hour visit in Washington, they can have about 180 minutes of tete-a-tete, divided into three separate intervals . . .

Harlan Miller

That is, unless they decide to stay up very late after the White House dinner; and even so they will have to put in two 15-hour days to manage it . . .

It is likelier that they'll have less than 90 minutes alone.

One youngish Congressman has been worrying so much about what he and his wife should wear to the Embassy party for the King and Queen today that he finally dreamed a nightmare about the whole thing. He could see himself and his mate dressed in nothing but embarrassment, standing in a long row of formally clad people dressed within an inch of their lives.

As the King and Queen passed, they paused and stared at the nude Americans in amazement. Then the King began to take his coat off, and just then the Congressman woke up in a sweat.

He was only partly reassured to find hanging on the bathroom door the cutaway he had borrowed from a Congressman who wasn't invited.

"—a garden-party nightmare"

By a combination of shrewdness and luck, the State Dept. has saved more than a million dollars on building expense in the Hitler domains . . .

Instead of a proposed $1,000,000 building in Berlin, present diplomatic quarters were remodeled for $60,000; and new construction planned for a long time has been abandoned in Vienna and Prague—at least for the present.

Savings in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia were due, of course, to German conquest of these countries . . . eliminating our legations . . . In Berlin the Nazis suddenly ordered four buildings occupied by American officials evacuated. Then the State Department made a dicker whereby the United States obtained German marks for the rebuilding of the embassy building at a fraction of their official value . . .

We did not send workers for the job, as the Germans did when they enlarged their quarters in London, and as they may do here if they ever go ahead with dormant plans for a new embassy here.

MEMO TO THE KING: To you and the Queen, as to other foreign visitors, we may not seem such a remarkably peaceful nation as we really are . . . You will probably go away feeling we are more warlike than in truth we are, because wherever you go there will be not only quite a few Army and Navy outfits, with tanks beside you and bombers overhead, but also half a dozen types of uniforms which at a hasty glance may seem military, too.

"—all sorts of uniforms"

Well, I want to spare you such an illusion so you won't go away with mistaken ideas.

I have counted as many as 11 different kinds of uniforms at the railroad depot in some small far western town where the President stopped on a transcontinental tour; and eight or nine of these uniforms were merely quasi- or pseudo- or demi- or semi-military, or more likely not military at all. Zounds, how peaceful we are!

One American whom the King won't meet today or tomorrow is the one who may, from an Anglo-American slant, be the most important Yankee in the Republic. He is Clarence Streit, author of "Union Now" and of the plan to federate 15 "Atlantic democracies" into a superstate.

The 15 countries and dominions are the U. S. A., Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, Ireland, France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Finland. Germany is not now up for membership.

The total population would be 280,000,000. This superstate would have a House of Representatives of 540 members, one for each 500,000 of population. This would give the U. S. 252 members, all the British countries 140 together.

In the Senate of 40 members (two for each 25,000,000 or fraction thereof) we would have 8 or 10 members, the British Empire 14 members . . .

Thus neither the British nor ourselves would have a majority; together we would dominate Mr. Streit's Union . . .

Such a strange dream probably frightens the British as much as it frightens some Americans. Maybe that's why Mr. Streit isn't going to any of the parties for the King. . . . But that is trivial; Streit happens to be lecturing out West now. In this country supporters for the plan are organizing in a dozen cities, and support is developing in England, Holland, Sweden and France. The Germans are translating the book, too.

Arms Embargo Repeal Voted By Committee

Hull's Key Proposals Indorsed, but Report Is Postponed

By Robert C. Albright

The House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday again called for repeal of neutrality act arms embargoes and approved wartime power for the President to fix "combat zones" in which American travel would be barred.

Indorsing these two key neutrality recommendations of Secretary of State Hull by votes of 13 to 9 and 14 to 9, the committee postponed final action on the Administration bill until next week.

An effort by Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, acting chairman of the committee, to complete consideration of the measure yesterday was turned back by a 12 to 11 ballot after Republicans protested in a body.

Favorable Report Listed

A favorable report on the bill was taken for granted, probably Monday or Tuesday. House consideration is scheduled within the month, after which the bill must face a threatened Senate filibuster.

Meantime, mandatory neutrality bloc Senators started circulating a declaration of their opposition to arms embargo repeal and the Administration's own "cash and carry" program for all commodities.

Described as an answer to the Secretary of State's recent neutrality act recommendations, the statement calling these "unneutral" was to be passed among Senators in advance of Senate consideration of the bill, with a view to measuring and consolidating opposition strength.

Behind the move was Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, with the reported support of Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho; Senator Johnson (Republican), of California; Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, and others.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee attempt to hold a late afternoon and night session in an effort to report the bill favorably yesterday was blocked when three committee Democrats joined nine Republicans in opposing an immediate report.

Republicans openly charged the committee leadership with attempting to court British favor by approving the measure in advance of arrival in Washington today of King George and Queen Elizabeth. Acting Committee Chairman Bloom indignantly denied it.

Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, charged that "the object of reporting that bill—which is not a neutrality bill at all and which is wholly drawn in favor of England—was to present the King tomorrow with the legislation."

Acting Chairman Bloom replied: "That is the most foolish statement I ever heard. Such statements as that will get any country into war."

Tinkham Suspects Entente

Earlier in the House, the black-whiskered Tinkham asked if the "unprecedented visit" of the King "does in fact signify an entente or military understanding between the Administration and the British government for the preservation of the British Empire at the expense of American blood and American treasure." He suggested a resolution notifying the world that the "United States is not the pawn and ally of the British Empire."

Reaffirmation of the House Foreign Affairs Committee stand for repeal of the arms embargo came with the defeat of an amendment by Representative Schiffler (Republican), of West Virginia, to continue intact munitions embargoes in the present law. A less drastic amendment by Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, was defeated Tuesday.

Fish Move Defeated

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, sponsored an unsuccessful effort to strike from the bill Section 3, which would empower the President to proclaim areas of combat operations in wartime and regulate American traffic in such zones. Fish charged the section "gives the President war-making power" and "power to line up with one side or the other."

With the first three sections of the bill approved, including the most controversial provision, the committee Monday will consider Section 4, which restricts financial transactions with belligerents and requires transfer of title to the foreign purchaser before goods can be shipped to a warring nation.

Labor Board Orders New Packing Hearing

Halting at least temporarily an effort by the Congress of Industrial Organizations to organize 60,000 workers in West Coast packing plants on an industrial basis, the National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered a rehearing in a case filed by the C. I. O. against 16 California packing companies.

The decision placed a curb on activities of the NLRB's own examiners, holding that Charles A. Wood, trial examiner, had exceeded his authority in previous hearings. All records compiled in the hearings by Wood were ordered set aside.

Tells About Finks

of Youngstown, Ohio, testified at a Senate sub-committee hearing yesterday that legislation outlawing high wages for strikebreakers would not halt their activities because their biggest compensation came from stealing. Kuhl said, "Finks will take anything that's not nailed down"

Murphy May Hold Hearings On Civil Rights

Object Reported to Be Airing of Cases That Escape Courts

Attorney General Murphy revealed yesterday that the Justice Department may hold public hearings "on more conspicuous violations" of the civil liberties guarantees of the Constitution.

The disclosure raised the question whether the department will ask Congress for legislation granting it power to subpena witnesses and records.

This would be essential, it is pointed out, if hearings should be relied upon to any large extent as a means of directing public attention to developments.

Murphy said the civil liberties unit set up in the department is only the beginning of the department's crusade.

The object of the possible hearings, it is understood, would be to bring to light situations where the department has been unable to build up cases for court action.

Murphy said that, if hearings are held, they would be similar to the investigation of the La Follette civil liberties committee.

Department investigators have been tracking down complaints of civil-liberties violations. Particular attention has been given to activities on the Pacific Coast.

Former Strikebreakers Heard

By the Associated Press.

Drawing upon their own professional experiences, two self-styled former strikebreakers expressed the view yesterday that outlawing reports by labor spies, as provided in a pending bill, would have little effect on strike-breaking agencies.

The witness, C. M. (Red) Kuhl, of Youngstown, Ohio, and Paul Maggart, of Cleveland, told a Senate sub-committee that a strikebreaker's job consisted largely of discrediting strikers, disrupting unions and other activities on which no reports were needed.

Before another Senate sub-committee where changes in the Wagner act are being considered, employers criticized the Labor Board bitterly. One, a J. Wiltse, of Ann Arbor, Mich., called for its abolition.

Charles Fahy, general counsel for the Labor Board, told a House committee the board would extend from five to ten days the notice given an employer before a hearing on a complaint.

Thomas Calls MacLeish Aide ToCommunists

Librarian-Designate Of Congress Defended In House Debate

Archibald MacLeish, noted poet whom President Roosevelt appointed Librarian of Congress, was named in an angry House debate yesterday as "one of the leading fellow-travelers of the Communist Party."

The charge was made by Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, who added that the Administration has been placing friends of communism in "key positions" of the Government.

Jumping to his feet, Majority Leader Rayburn vehemently shouted a denial, declaring "I think the gentleman's statement is little short of slander."

Schafer to Offer List

As an upshot of the argument, Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, obtained permission to put in the record a list of Government officials whom he said lean toward communism. Schafer said he would offer the list in a few days.

The appointment of MacLeish—war veteran, Pulitzer Prize winner, professor of poetry at Princeton and contributor to periodicals as diverse as Fortune and The Nation—raises "the vital and alarming issue of Communist influence," said Thomas.

The New Jersey Republican charged that MacLeish ranks in importance as a "fellow traveler" not far behind Robert Morss Lovett, recently appointed Government secretary of the Virgin Islands.

Pressed by Rayburn to say whether or not MacLeish is a Communist, Thomas countered by asserting the poet "is aiding and abetting the Communist Party all the time, but for some reason does not want to become a member of the Communist Party."

In a statement Thomas denounced MacLeish for his part in setting up the League of American Writers, of whose 23 founders, said Thomas, 12 were "well-known Communists." Other "united front" organizations MacLeish has belonged to, said Thomas, were the National Committeee of the Medical Bureau to Aid Spanish Democracy, and the National Advisory Committee of the American Youth Congress.

MacLeish himself said yesterday at his summer home at Conway, Mass., that "none would be more shocked to learn that I purportedly am a Communist, than the Communists themselves." He added that "the Communist press has been attacking me for years."

The 47-year-old writer, whom President Roosevelt called "a gentleman and a scholar," declared, "I believe very strongly in democracy and always have endeavored to make that clear in face of the attacks upon me."

May Protest Nomination

New York, June 7 (AP).—A prediction that the Nation's librarians, "who generally are not a noisy lot," would protest the nomination of Archibald MacLeish as librarian of Congress was made today by Dr. Milton James Ferguson, president of the American Library Association.

Two Insurance Chiefs Ask Limit On Competition

Two insurance executives expressed the opinion before the monopoly investigating committee yesterday that competition in the insurance business should be limited for the best interests of the public and the companies.

H. S. Beers, vice president of the Aetna Life Insurance Co., said he thought competition was desirable except where it would hurt insurance companies without benefitting customers.

Both he and Valentine Howell, vice president of the Prudential Insurance Co., indicated belief this competition should not go so far as to bring about insurance rate cutting that might be disastrous to the companies.

Third-Term Query Elicits 'Loyal' Pledge From Wallace

Secretary Says Whole Cabinet Is Faithful to President; Ickes Reported Furious Over Handling of His Captions

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday became a passive participant in the Roosevelt third-term procession by declaring his "loyalty" to the Chief Executive in case he should be a candidate again.

Asked at a press conference to comment on a third-term appeal in a recent magazine article by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Wallace replied:

"I'm sure all members of the Cabinet whom Secretary Ickes has honored are completely loyal to President Roosevelt."

Ickes Caption-Writer

The Ickes article appeared in a recent issue of Look magazine as a succession of cutlines for pictures. Beneath pictures of Wallace, Secretary of State Hull, Attorney General Farley, Vice President Garner and four prospective Republican candidates, Ickes was represented by the magazine as saying no one of the group "could be influential in world affairs while at the same time commanding the respect of his own people."

Sources close to Ickes said he had mentioned no prospective candidate by name, except the President, in the article as submitted to the magazine. Ickes, it is reported, was indignant over the form in which the article appeared and has exacted from the editors a promise to publish in full the article as submitted.

At least two of the President's callers yesterday discussed the question of a third term—former Senator Bulkley, Ohio Democrat, and Mayor Maury Maverick of San Antonio, former member of the House.

No Drawing Out

Both Bulkley and Maverick had Presidential support in last year's elections and both were defeated.

Bulkley told newspapermen he "tried to draw him (the President) out on his intentions, but there was nothing doing."

Maverick, who already had announced he favored a third term, said he was sure Mr. Roosevelt would be for "a Progressive" next year. As to a third term, he remarked that he thought he was against a "fourth term" and felt sure he would oppose a "fifth term" for the President.

G. O. P. Radical, Townsend Vote Shows, Says Farley

The recent House vote on the Townsend old-age pension plan demonstrated that the Republicans are radicals and the Democratic Party is conservative, Postmaster General Farley declared in a radio address last night.

Taking a hand at satire to stir his Republican opponents, Farley said that the Republicans had played a hoax on the aged people; that the Democrats killed the bill, which he described as "fantastic." Fifty-five Republicans voted for the bill as did 40 Democrats.

Chiding Republicans for putting on a "National Debt Week," Farley said the United States Treasury is in sounder condition than any other treasury on earth, but that the Townsend plan, championed by 55 Republicans in the House vote, would cost $24,000,000,000 a year.

Hope Is Lost For July 15 Adjournment

Democrat Leaders Run Into Trouble With Major Bills

By International News Service.

Democratic leaders yesterday abandoned hope for July 15 adjournment of Congress as prime administration bills headed into unexpected difficulties.

Plans to jettison important proposals to permit speedy consideration of three vital bills—taxes, relief and gold devaluation—before their July 1 deadline, were agreed upon by the leaders.

Neither the tax nor relief bills are ready for action, while President Roosevelt's gold devaluation and the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund are facing a bitter Senate battle.

Unless action by both branches is completed on all three by July 1, when present law expires, the Government stands to lose millions in excise taxes, faces abandonment at least temporarily of its monetary policy, and will see 2,400,000 persons thrown off the relief rolls.

Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Rayburn announced at a press conference yesterday that the tax and relief bills would have to be passed by July 1, and revealed they had urged Congressional committees to whip the bills in shape for consideration by the House next week.

Endangering passage of the gold devaluation bill before the deadline is an anti-New Deal bloc headed by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia.

President Roosevelt personally has urged Senators to back the bill in view of the international situation and a threat of a depreciated currency war.

The President may make a swing across the country in July and come back in time for adjournment, if it is delayed that long, be indicated Tuesday.

Democratic leaders conceded yesterday that Congress might remain in session until August, but asserted they would continue their drive for an early quitting date.

Harrington To Go Before Relief Inquiry

Administrator Will Appear on Eve of Vote by House Unit

With details of the 1940 WPA bill virtually settled, the House Appropriations sub-committee handling relief will hear Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, in a last-minute appearance before a final committee vote is taken on the measure early next week.

It is understood that the bill grants the WPA practically the entire sum of $1,477,000,000 requested by President Roosevelt, except for certain administrative economies and $125,000,000 earmarked for a revived PWA. However, another Presidential request for $123,000,000 for the National Youth Administration has been slashed in committee, it was learned.

In hearings yesterday before the same sub-committee, which is conducting an investigation of the WPA, a witness testified that of 151 night watchmen employed by the City of Cleveland on WPA projects, he was unable to find 41 during a five-day check.

Couldn't Find Watchmen

The witness, George J. Shillito, a committee investigator, said many of the night watchmen were political precinct captains or ward committeemen. He stated that the salaries paid the watchmen by Cleveland were credited as part of the municipality's sponsorship contribution toward the projects.

Shillito testified that of 52 teachers in an adult education project in Cleveland, 19 had no prior teaching experience and were unable to obtain recommendations by the board of education.

"Collective Bargaining" Taught

The witness said one of the teachers, whose previous experience had been in "organizing," taught "collective bargaining" in the WPA project. Another, whose prior experience had consisted of "lecturing to union groups, organizing and newspaper work," taught "labor problems" and "civics," said Shillito.

Allen W. Stephens, a Treasury Department engineer, said one Pennsylvania highway project had cost $89,000 a mile, or a total of $1,960,611, when $365,000 would have been a high price if the work had been done under private contract. Stephens said one reason for the excessive cost was that two years after the road had been begun, the State highway department changed plans to provide two extra traffic lanes.

Stephens, who also had investigated New York construction projects, revealed that he and an associate recently received packages containing a little metal ball, a screw and the card of Col. Brehon Somervell, New York City WPA administrator.

Calls It Bad Taste

"Apparently it was his way of designating you fellows as a couple of 'screwballs,'" said Representative Woodrum, acting chairman of the committee.

"I suppose so," Stephens replied.

Pointing out that Stephens and his associate, Peter Hein, had been assigned to the inquiry when the committee asked the Treasury Department for its best engineers, Woodrum said they had performed "fine, competent service." He added that "to say that this action of the New York administrator was in extremely bad taste is to put it very mildly."

Murphy Talks Of Getting Rid Of Alcatraz

ATTY. GEN. MURPHY

Effect of Prison Is 'Sinister, Vicious,' Says Legal Chief

Attorney General Murphy revealed yesterday that the Department was considering abandoning Alcatraz, the former United States Army prison, which five years ago was turned into an "escape-proof" penitentiary for criminals of the most vicious type.

A visit to Alcatraz a short time ago convinced Murphy that the psychology it created was bad. He does not like the idea, he said, of an imitation of "Devil's Island."

The effect on the 302 prisoners there, he said, is "sinister and vicious." Moreover, he thought it was an injustice to San Francisco "to have that place of horror at its doorstep."

Murphy said he favored retention of a special prison for the type of criminal sent to Alcatraz, but he would like to have a place with greater opportunities for work for prisoners, including particularly prison farms.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the appropriation bill for the Justice Department contains a $100,000 item for making "tool-proof" bars on cells at Alcatraz and for piping water there from the mainland.

Refugees, Kin Beseech Cuba For Haven

By the United Press.

Havana, June 7.—More than 900 German Jewish refugees, denied a New World haven, today were reported en route back to Hamburg aboard the Nazi liner St. Louis while despairing relatives and friends here pleaded with refugee aid groups to arrange a landing place for them.

"Save my wife and 8-month-old infant," read one of dozens of telegrams received by Lawrence Berenson, of New York, counsel for the National Refugee Co-ordinating Committee. Other telegraphic pleas were similarly poignant.

But President Leredo Bru, who yesterday withdrew his offer of a temporary haven on the Isle of Pines after Berenson failed to raise the amount demanded to feed and house the refugees and guarantee their ultimate departure, remained adamant in his refusal to permit them to land here.

"The matter is definitely ended," Interior Secretary Joaquin Ochotorena said when leaving the presidential palace.

Pergler Denies Break With Czech Ex-President

Dr. Charles Pergler, Washington attorney and former Czecho-Slovakian Minister to Japan and member of Parliament, yesterday denied a report that he is at odds with Dr. Edward Benes, former president of the Czechs, now in this country.

According to Dr. Pergler, a recent broadcast from Berlin charged he had informed President Roosevelt that Dr. Benes does not represent his countrymen. He called the broadcast "the blackest kind of miserable propaganda."

Army Bomber To Bear Hero Home to Mexico

Sarabia, Country's Lindbergh, Killed In Crash in Potomac

Francisco Sarabia, the "Mexican Lindbergh," will fly back in death to his mother.

He will ride not in the stubby-winged racing monoplane in which he set a new nonstop speed record from Mexico City to New York two weeks ago, but in one of the Army's "flying fortress" ordered by President Roosevelt to be his funeral plane.

Crashes in 4 Minutes

Sarabia, 39, Mexico's finest civilian aviator, whose air exploits have made him a national hero, was killed at 5:33 a. m. yesterday when failure of a 650-horsepower motor plunged his cream and red plane into the Potomac River.

Four minutes before he had kissed his wife and 10-year-old son good-by, waved gaily to a smiling gathering of Mexican Embassy officials and started down a runway at Bolling Field for his final take-off.

Hero's Funeral Planned

His destination had been Torreon, in the state of Durango, Mexico, the home of his mother, whom he was to have "surprised" with a visit.

Within a few hours of the tragedy, President Roosevelt offered to assign an Army plane to the task of carrying Sarabia's body to Mexico City, 55 miles from Torreon, where arrangements are being made for a hero's funeral.

The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, accepted the offer with "appreciation" last night, and announced that the journey would begin at 3:30 a. m. Saturday.

Santiago Sarabia, a brother of the flier, will accompany the body. An aide to Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson will ride in the funeral plane with a message of tribute from President Roosevelt.

Sarabia's wife, his sister, Senorita Agripina Sarabia, and his children, Maria, 11; Beatriz, 9, and Francisco, will depart Friday at 9 p. m. in an Eastern Airplanes plane provided by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker.

Motor Trouble Blamed

"Motor trouble during takeoff" was the official explanation of the crash pending an examination by Army and Civil Aeronautics Authority investigators.

The motor appeared to be working perfectly and the plane's behavior, in the opinion of observers, was in all ways normal as the tiny Bee and Gee racer roared about a mile down the runway and lifted slowly into the air.

The ship had climbed about 100 feet and was approximately 75 feet from shore when the motor froze without a sputter. Onlookers saw it nose into a glide and disappear in a geyser of water.

Counselor, Attache Dive In

Luis Quintanilla, counselor of the embassy, and Lieut. Comdr. Manuel Zermeno, naval attache, stripped off their clothing and swam to the plane. Both dived for the body. Quintanilla said he reached it, but could not pry the flyer loose from the ship's cabin.

"I think beyond doubt he was dead by then," Quintanilla said. An Army surgeon, Capt. William Lawton, said he believed Sarabia's neck had been fractured.

During the two hours that Navy crews and police labored at the gruesome task of lifting the plane from the river mud and cutting the body away from the twisted fuselage with hack saws, Senora Sarabia and Francisco, her son, sat on the river bank, watching, deaf to all entreaties that they leave the scene.

Boy Aims to Be Pilot

An embassy attache asked Francisco if he wanted anything. The boy replied in Spanish: "Only my father. You must do anything to save my father."

The boy was asked if, even now, he wished to become a pilot. The answer came swiftly:

Flew for Goodwill

Sarabia held the nonstop record from Mexico City to Los Angeles and many a speed record to Central American points. Two weeks ago he shattered the Mexico-New York record which Amelia Earhart set in 1936 by almost four hours, skimming over the 2,085 miles in 10 hours 45 minutes.

He had flown to New York as a goodwill gesture in the opening of the Mexican exhibition at the World's Fair. Monday he had called on Secretary of War Woodring and had gone to the White House with a note from President Cardenas. He had been toasted at a luncheon given by an aviators' club and at a reception at the embassy.

Sarabia, a friend here recalled yesterday, was the only Mexican pilot with whom President Cardenas would fly. Head of one of the largest of the Mexican airlines and a pilot with 12,000 flying hours in 13 years, he never had known anything more serious than a forced landing.

Crash in Potomac Kills Mexico's Lindy

Milk Profits as High as 34% Reported for District Firms

By James D. Secrest.

Net profits of local dairies ranging from 14 to 34 per cent on invested capital were reported yesterday to the Bates sub-committee investigating the District milk situation.

J. Edward Burroughs, counsel of the sub-committee, disclosed that the committee's process servers had been unable to locate C. Y. Stephens, owner of Comico Products, Alexandria, Va. who also is associated with Highland Farms Dairy and the High Ice Cream Co.

J. A. Wilson, vice president and general manager of Comico, was called to the stand after a committee auditor had testified that Highland Farms had purchased large quantities of cream from Stephens and Arthur V. Robinson, who operates the Rose Cream Cheese Co.

After checking at the Health Department, Chairman Bates stated that neither Stephens nor Robinson had a permit to sell cream in Washington for fluid consumption.

Glen W. Rhodes, auditor from the General Accounting Office, testified that Highland Farms books showed that it bought 7,668 gallons of cream from Stephens and 14,938 gallons from Robinson in 1938, and 4,017 gallons from Stephens between January and March, 1939.

Highland Farms earned for the last fiscal year a net profit of $23,004.04, or 33.98 per cent, on its investment, the auditor testified, although no executive salaries were included in the operating expenses as is customary with other dairies.

15.6 Per Cent Profit Reported

Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase earned a net profit of $462,205.05, or 15.6 per cent, on its investment last year, according to the calculations of Norman E. Simpson, another General Accounting Office accountant, who had been lent to the committee.

Simpson also disclosed that Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase held a note of $60,000 on Embassy and that the note had been reduced from $190,000. Roger J. Whiteford, counsel for the Chestnut Farms, said that the note was held by Chevy Chase at the time it was purchased by National Dairy Products.

Edgar Brawner, president of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, was paid $14,000 salary and a $200 Christmas present last year, the auditor said. The salaries of other officials ranged from $10,000 for one vice president to $6,000 for another. The secretary-treasurer, he said, was paid $9,500.

Model Farms Report

Model Farms Dairy, Simpson testified, earned a net profit of $5,330.51 or 14.68 per cent on its investment. Officials were paid $300 a month.

Burroughs developed during testimony on Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase accounts that the dairy's books showed a profit of only one-fifth of a cent a quart on milk which retails for 14 cents and one-third of a cent a quart on all milk sales.

Bottle expenses alone, the auditor said, amounted to $224,371.84 last year.

Today the sub-committee will delve into the accounts of Thompson's Dairy when it resumes at 2 p. m., after the House District Committee acts on the Schulte milk bill in executive session this morning.

As a safeguard against further disorders, such as that which marked Tuesday's meeting, a Capitol policeman was stationed in the hearing room all day. Corporation Counsel Seal was present during the morning, but Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, did not attend the session.

Man's Body Found In Potomac River

The body of an unidentified white man was found floating in the Potomac River below Key Bridge and near Theodore Roosevelt Island yesterday. Harbor police took it to the District Morgue, where examination disclosed it had been in the water about 36 hours.

Hazen Reveals 'Mistakes' in Jobless Pay

12 Per Cent Inaccurate Last July, Routine Audit Discloses

Commissioner Hazen late yesterday made public reports by District government auditors showing that in the past year a variety of "mistakes" had been made in benefit payments to the jobless by the District Unemployment Compensation Board.

After release of the reports—which had been requested by Sidney Katz, secretary of the Maryland and Virginia Industrial Union Council—Hazen said he would ask the director of the board, John A. Marshall, for a report stating what has been done to correct the errors and what procedure should be followed to eliminate repetition.

The auditors' reports, routine under the social security act, show that in one month, as many as 12 per cent of the payments were inaccurate. Commissioner Hazen, who is also chairman of the compensation board, said that "a majority" of the mistakes had been corrected.

The records, which are kept in District Auditor Daniel Donovan's office, reveal that the audit was made for July, August, September and October, of last year.

July mistakes were made in 718 out of 5,706 cases.

The auditors said the "mistakes" include granting of benefit payments to cases having "dependents" in which the dependents were not properly identified; cases of underpayments; cases of erroneous payments and some cases of "fraud" by applicants.

The underpayments "were caused mostly by careless computations or incomplete search of available records prior to the original computations of claims."

LindberghSponsor, Orteig, Expires

New York, June 7 (AP).—Raymond Orteig, 69, hotel proprietor and donor of the $25,000 prize won by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for his transatlantic flight in 1927, died last night.

Orteig was so certain Lindbergh would succeed in flying the Atlantic that he went to France to greet him. He missed a train in southern France and did not see the flier until the day after he landed.

Policeman Shot, 125 Officers Hunt Red-Headed Girl

Michigan City, Ind., June 7 (INS).—Police cars blocked every highway into Michigan City late today and a radio-equipped plane droned overhead as 125 police sought a red-haired girl and her male companion who shot a policeman.

Policemen Frank Cowgill and James Shelton stopped a small sedan and demanded to see the title certificate. Pretending to look for it, the man whipped out a revolver.

He shoved the weapon into the girl's hand, ordering her to watch the two policemen while he disposed of their squad car. Cowgill suddenly leaped at the young woman. She fired the shot which struck his knee.

Whirling the squad car around, the gunman attempted to run over Cowgill, who lay helpless in the street.

Man Slays Wife, Shoots Her Sister

Lonnie Battle, colored, 45, shot his wife to death, critically wounded his sister-in-law, and then threw himself off the Taft Bridge early yesterday, after an argument at the Battle home, 1331 Twenty-second street northwest.

Police found Mrs. Nana Battle, 30, dead, and Alice Mallory, 19, her sister, shot in the back when they entered the home in response to a call from neighbors. A .25-caliber revolver was found on the floor.

A lookout was broadcast for Lonnie, and less than ten minutes later his body was found 120 feet below the Taft Bridge on Rock Creek parkway.

Britain Grants Full Alliance To Russia

Special Envoy Will Carry 'Reciprocity' Offer to Moscow

By International News Service.

London, June 7.—Britain and France tonight agreed to the major conditions asked by Soviet Russia in the proposed triple alliance Nazi-Fascist aggression, and offered immediate, full armed support in the event Russia goes to war to halt further "expansion" in Europe.

The Anglo-French decision and final terms for molding the proposed mutual defense pact with the Soviet Union will be carried perhaps to the Kremlin itself by a special foreign office emissary designated by Prime Minister Chamberlain.

The British premier revealed in the House of Commons Britain's decision to join France in offering the virtually ironclad military guarantees. He said that any British guarantees to Russia were being made on a basis of complete reciprocity.

Chosen to negotiate in Moscow and pave the way toward success of Britain's attempts to include Russia in the Anglo-French chain of alliances against Nazi-Fascist "expansion," was William Strang, veteran expert of the British foreign office and former counselor to the embassy in Moscow.

The foreign office expert now is in Warsaw concluding an important diplomatic mission.

In disclosing the government's decision to send an emissary to Moscow, the prime minister said the foreign office representative's chief function will be to fill in for Ambassador Sir William Seeds on the attitude of His Majesty's government on all outstanding points of argument for the proposed Anglo-French-Soviet antiaggression front. Chamberlain added:

"It is hoped that as a result negotiations will be accelerated toward finding a formula acceptable to all for insurance of co-operation."

Russia Pessimistic

Moscow, June 7 (AP).—Soviet Russia received with intense interest tonight Britain's decision to send a special envoy to Moscow for direct mutual pact negotiations, but held to the view that Britain and France should guarantee the Baltic states whether those countries like it or not.

In the absence of official comment foreign observers speculated on how the Soviet government would receive Britain's decision to send a civil servant to Moscow.

A point has been made in the Soviet press that Foreign Minister Chamberlain, himself, didn't hesitate to go to Godeberg and Berchtesgaden when negotiations with Chancellor Hitler seemed vital.

The attitude here is that Moscow is just as important as Berchtesgaden.

Bucharest, June 7.—King Carol proclaimed today that Rumania was rearming at top speed "to safeguard her own interests" and that "we want peace but not at all costs."

Most profits from new trade treaties with Germany, Great Britain and France, he said, must be devoted to national defense.

In a speech interpreted by diplomats as a strong warning to any territory-hunting neighbor, Carol opened his new non-party Parliament, which he said was designed to end political turmoil at home and which no longer represents parties but guilds of workers.

"There is now perfect calm and unity in Rumania, whereby we can work and face all dangers," he told the white-uniformed deputies and senators.

"We want peace, but not peace at all costs," the King said. "We want peace but with respect for liberty, independence and territorial integrity of Rumania. We have made great sacrifices for the army, as large orders have been placed for equipping our troops."

He reviewed achievements of his semifascistic regime since he proposed a new constitution 16 months ago, declared Rumania had been "purified of political corruption," and that the budget had been balanced, and promised to modernize the court system, build roads and develop industry.

Japanese Hint Executions for Alien Meddlers

Spokesman Cites as Example the Death of Briton in Shanghai

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, June 7.—A Japanese spokesman today threatened "summary action" including possibly indefinite detention or even execution against any foreigners whose acts are considered dangerous to Japanese forces in the occupied areas of China.

Reliable quarters interpreted the statement as a new attempt by Japan to assume the rights of a belligerent while avoiding a declaration of war against China, which might stop war supplies from the United States and elsewhere.

The spokesman said an example of the threatened measures was the treatment given R. M. Tinkler, British employe of a British-owned cotton mill in Pootung, Shanghai. He died early today from head, foot and abdominal wounds inflicted by Japanese who charged that he fired on Japanese marines when they entered the mill to stop a fight among Chinese strikers and nonstrikers.

Incident "Serious" to British

(A London dispatch said the British government took a "serous view" of the incident, which British officials declared grew out of labor trouble which the Japanese were fomenting in an effort to make the situation unbearable for British interests in China.) Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British Ambassador in Tokyo, was said to have made representations in Tokyo.)

A Navy spokesman blamed Tinkler for the injuries and said Japan was preparing "further demands" on British authorities. He said Tinkler walked unaided to Japanese headquarters where, despite three severe wounds in the abdomen, he "fought against treatment for several hours," causing complications which resulted in death.

He denied reports Tinkler was bayoneted after reaching headquarters.

Hint Settlement Sought

Tokyo (Thursday), June 8 (INS).—A strong indication that Japan is seeking a "settlement" or perhaps peace in the long and bloody Sino-Japanese war came today in a dispatch of the Domei Japanese News Agency.

Japan's highest government leaders, including Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, are closely considering settlement of the "China incident," according to Domei.

Japanese Blame British Ship for Firing on Airliner

Tokyo, June 7 (AP).—A foreign warship, "apparently a British cruiser," fired on a Japanese airliner east of Hongkong at 11 a. m. (10 p. m., E. S. T. Tuesday), the Japanese news agency, Domei, reported today.

The pilot said the plane escaped damage although ten shots were fired and several shells exploded within 100 yards of his plane.

While "far outside British waters" and cruising at 5,000 feet altitude, the pilot was quoted as saying, a warship carrying a British flag and similar insignia painted on her sides, suddenly swung her anti-aircraft guns into action.

After the first shot the pilot began climbing and zigzagging. He returned at once to Taihoku after escaping the shots.

Hitler Seals Two Baltic Pacts; Leaves for Mountains

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 7.—Adolf Hitler concluded nonaggresion pacts with Latvia and Estonia today and thereby completed the first part of his program to thwart what Nazis call French-British attempts to encircle Germany through guarantees of assistance against aggression.

Afterward the Fuehrer left the 90-degree heat of Berlin for his cool Alpine retreat near Berchtesgaden, where he expects to remain until September, except for short intervals.

The chancellery staff moved south with him and government officials expressed confidence that—so far as Germany has anything to do with it—Europe is embarking upon a quiet period that will last at least unautumn.

They said they were willing to wager there would be no war in the near future, despite tension between Germany and Poland over the Free City of Danzig and Pomorze (the Polish Corridor). Danzig, they asserted, "will become a part of the greater Germany before next November—and by peaceful means."

The nonaggression pacts, almost identical with one concluded last week in Denmark, were signed in the foreign office by William Munters, Karl Selter and Joachim von Ribbentrop, foreign ministers, respectively, of Latvia, Estonia and Germany.

Estonia and Latvia were among the 31 nations listed by President Roosevelt in his April 15 message to Hitler and Premier Mussolini asking assurances that Germany and Italy had no aggressive designs on them.

English Bouquets, China, Silver, Dresses Displayed in Windows

Shops along Connecticut avenue, over which Their Majesties will pass tomorrow afternoon on their way to the garden party at the British Embassy, have tried to make their display windows as "English" as possible.

Fine china and silver, English bouquets of vari-colored flowers, and trailing dresses such as English ladies wear to garden festivities will hold prominent places.

More large, photographs of the King and Queen were in evidence along this thoroughfare yesterday than elsewhere in Washington. Most of the shops are displaying pictures of the royal couple together, but some of them have separate photographs with the royal cipher between.

Establishment owners were making "trades" with their neighbors, in order that more Union Jacks might be put out. A small store, with just one big flag out front, would need to make it an American one; but if several went in together the flags could alternate.

Small flag clusters were everywhere, with more to be put up this morning.

While there has been little request for rented seats and very little "xcitement" caused by outsiders asking for Connecticut avenue window space, employes and residents in most of the apartment houses and business establishments have the date down on their books and there is little possibility of a vacant window when the cars go by between 4:45 and 5 o'clock.

7 D. C. Detectives Chosen to Stick By Sovereigns

Seven detective sergeants yesterday were chosen as special guards to the King and Queen, to be with them 'from the time of their arrival until their departure."

Detective Sergt. William J. Liverman, of the homicide squad, was placed in charge of the squad, and the others include Sergts. Hubert Brodie, Robert S. Bryant, Eugene Lambert, Howard Ogle, Aubrey M. Tolson and Jacob Wolf. Wolf will act as driver for the squad.

King to Honor Arlington Dead Tomorrow

Will Decorate Tomb Of Unknown Soldier And Canadian Cross

King George will pay tribute to the American and Canadian World War dead tomorrow at Arlington National Cemetery.

Accompanied by Queen Elizabeth, President and Mrs. Roosevelt and foreign diplomats and American officials, George VI will place wreaths on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the Canadian Cross. The ceremony will be carried out upon the return of the royal visitors from Mount Vernon at 3:25.

Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the Army, will meet the King as he approaches the Unknown Soldier's Tomb and escort him to the shrine. Troops of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps will present arms, the Army Band will play the British and American anthems, and Taps will be sounded. The same ceremony will be conducted at the Canadian Cross. Twenty-one gun salutes will be sounded as the party enters and leaves the cemetery.

Officials say a large number can view the ceremonies at the Canadian Cross. Best spots to see the Unknown Soldier honors and the royal party's entry are along Roosevelt and Wilson avenues in the cemetery. The grounds will be closed to automobiles but open to pedestrians all day.

Socialist Mayor To Greet Royalty

Milwaukee, June 7 (AP).—Milwaukee's Socialist mayor, Daniel W. Hoan, who once cried "To hell with kings; I stand with the working man," has changed his mind about royalty and will be honorary chairman of the committee which will welcome Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway to Milwaukee June 20. He also will make one of the speeches at the Leif Ericsson Monument, upon which Prince Olav will place a wreath.

Twenty years ago Hoan refused to act as the official host to Albert, King of the Belgians, expressing an opinion of kings which became known throughout the world.

Policeman Assigned to King Once Served With Irish Army

Pat O'Sullivan Proud to Do His Duty; As Member of Republican Army He Faced British Troops at Lispole and Conor Hill

Patrick Joseph O'Sullivan is worried. He doesn't want to appear inhospitable—but he would just as soon the King and Queen of Great Britain weren't coming.

Patrick Joseph O'Sullivan is proud to be an Irishman—and he's just as proud to do his duty without complaint. He is a Metropolitan policeman, attached to the Fourth Precinct, and has been assigned guard duty for the royal reception. But long before he was a policeman, O'Sullivan was a member of the Irish Republican Army and pointed a musket or two at troops of the late King George V.

That's why he's wondering what the boys back in County Kerry would say if they knew his job today was to protect the King and Queen of England.

"But get me straight," said O'Sullivan, with a brogue you could cut with a knife, "it's my duty and I'm doing it. It's all in the job."

When he was a member of the I. R. A. O'Sullivan—better known as Pat to his associates on the force—saw duty at Lispole and Conor Hill. He said it was his duty then to fight the King's troops just as it is now to protect the King's life. He's not complaining—just a little worried, that's all.

O'Sullivan lives at 1145 Neal street northeast.

oil from the South and the West are a few of the gifts Mrs. Roosevelt mentioned as having been received.

In several instances, food items have been worked into the menus, she said. More often, however, this concession to thoughtful donors was not possible. But anyway, both meals served up for Their Majesties on their first day at the White House will be as American as the corn pone featured on the dinner menu.

At luncheon in the private dining room today guests will include, in addition to the King and Queen and members of their party, three Roosevelt sons and their wives—Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, and Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.

Sweetbreads on Menu

The company will be served:

Minted melon balls
Green turtle soup
Broiled sweetbreads and mushrooms
Asaparagus Saratoga chips Hearts of lettuce and Roquefort dressing
Pineapple sponge short cake
Coffee

The 83 guests attending the State dinner this evening will sit at a horseshoe table, decked with the famous gold centerpiece purchased in the Monroe Administrations and laid with the F. D. R. white cobalt and blue Lenox china and the gold-plated knives, forks and spoons brought out only for state occasions.

The menu is as follows:

Clam cocktail
Calves head soup
Terrapin Corn pone
Boned capon and cranbery sauce
Peas Buttered beets
Sweet potato cones
Frozen cheese and watercress salad
Maple and almond ice cream
White pound cake and coffee

It is still a dead secret about which wines will be served and whether they will be foreign or domestic.

Guests at the musicale following the dinner will include some personal friends of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, as well as around 500 from official circles.

Featured artists, all of which will be presented to Their Majesties, will be Marian Anderson, contralto; Lawrence Tibbett, barytone; Alan Lomax, who will sing a group of cowboy songs to his own guitar accompaniment; the Coon Creek River Girls (singers and dancers), from Kentucky; the Soco Gap dancers, from Asheville, N. C., and a group of singers of Negro spirituals from Chapel Hill, N. C.

Tentmaker Wins And Loses Ticket To Royal Party

To William R. Russell, of 1809 Michigan avenue, president of the Capitol Awning Co., came a stroke of unbelievable good fortune yesterday. Because the British Ambassador liked the tents he made for today's royal garden party at the embassy, Russell received one of the coveted tickets to the affair.

Then came to Russell a stroke of ill fortune even greater. He lost his ticket.

His incredible buffetings by luck became known yesterday when Russell asked police to watch out for the prized pasteboard. Its number, he said, was 68.

Photographers Not to 'Rove' During Visit

Two to Be Stationed In Own Stand for Each Important 'Shot'

During the royal parade today there will be no "roving" photographers. For the first time, still and movie photographers covering a major event in Washington will be on stands built for them—and photograph from there only.

For the most important "shots" of the royal visit, pools have been formed and the name of one movie and one "still" man will be drawn for the event. Under arrangements by the White House Photographers Association, the work done by those two will be held up until prints have been distributed to all association members.

Approximately 150 photographers will be in the city covering the visit. The only two who will ride in the parade will be selected from a pool. They will be uniformed and ride in one of the armored Army cars. Pools also have been formed for the shots of the meeting between the President and King George VI in the state suite at Union Station, for the arrival of the party at the White House, for the garden party at the British Embassy and for the presentation of Boy Scouts to the King on the south grounds of the White House.

Reporters likewise have their coverage organized, although not in the precedent-making thoroughness of the photographers. And there'll be no swapping of news, as there is of photographs.

Visiting reporters will be entertained tonight at the Mayflower by the Overseas Writers Club, which also has invited other local writers. More than 250 are expected to attend the reception, which begins at 9 o'clock.

Every detail of press coverage has been checked by officials down to the placing of telephones.

Record Traffic Control Plan In Effect Today

Elaborate Precautions Taken to Safeguard British Sovereigns

Washington's welcome to the King and Queen of Great Britain today will include the most elaborate traffic control and street safety programs in the city's history.

Even President Roosevelt has taken a hand in minute plans to avoid congestion and eliminate every possible chance of mishap or delay t othe royal partff

With a principal part of the downtown area barred to vehicular traffic after 10 a. m., District motorists would do well to leave their cars at home. Rigid parking restrictions will be enforced "to the letter," say authorities, and no excuses for infractions of the special regulations will be accepted.

The 10 a. m. deadline will affect moving vehicles on Pennsylvania avenue from Peace Monument to Fifteenth street; on streets one block north and south along the entire route and within the vicinity of Union Station and the Capitol.

At 9:30 a. m., the ban against vehicles will become effective on Union Station Plaza—and this includes street cars. Trolley service along the parade route—from First to Fifteenth street on the Avenue—will stop at 10 a. m. and will not be resumed until the procession has passed.

North and south bound motorists will be permitted to cross Pennsylvania avenue only at three intersections—Seventh, Twelfth and Fourteenth streets. And even this will be prohibited after 10:30 a. m. and streets for a block on each side of the route will be closed with barricades of rope and steel cables.

The only autos to be permitted along the Avenue will be official—Diplomatic, White House, Army and reception. These vehicles will be identified with blue and white stickers.

All interstate buses will be met at the District Line by special police details and directed over special routes through the city.

Pedestrian traffic will be allowed to cross the avenue at all intersections until 10 minutes before the Presidential party leaves the White House en route to Union Station. After passage of the President, the public may again walk across the route until the royal party is within three blocks.

Parking Banned at 8 A. M.

During the period of prohibition against moving vehicles in the roped-off area, E, F and G streets will carry all traffic east and west. Parking on these streets will be banned at 8 a. m. from North Capitol street to Fifteenth street. Parking will be permitted on north and south streets—except within a block on each side of the avenue.

Police announced that all cars left on streets banned to parking will be towed away and owners will be required to post collateral as well as pay for towing charges.

Although they will be within a few feet of the royal party when it passes in review, individual policemen will be denied a glimpse of Their Majesties. Special orders require them to face the crowd.

A total of 1,043 policemen and 425 firemen will be assigned to special traffic and guard duty.

Just prior to 4 p. m.—scheduled time of the garden party at the British Embassy — Massachusetts avenue will be closed to the general public from Twenty-second street to Wisconsin avenue. Only cars en route to the party and residents of the section will be allowed to enter Massachusetts avenue. Those who live in the vicinity of the embassy must carry proper identification, setting forth their names and addresses.

From 3 p. m. until after the embassy party, parking will be prohibited on the following streets:

Both sides of Seventeenth street from Constitution avenue to Connecticut avenue; both sides of Connecticut avenue from K street to Dupont Circle and both sides of Massachusetts avenue from Dupont circle to Rock Creek drive.

Tomorrow, when the King and Queen visit Mount Vernon, the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard will be closed to moving vehicles after 12:30 p. m.

No Parking on Boulevard

Parking along the boulevard will be prohibited although the public will be admitted on foot to stand along the roadside for a look at the sovereigns as they drive back from Mount Vernon.

General parking restrictions, effective at 8 a. m. today, are as follows:

1. Entire Union Station Plaza.
2. Both sides of Louisiana avenue from Union Station Plaza to Constitution avenue.
3. Both sides of Delaware avenue from Union Station Plaza to Constitution avenue northeast.
4. Both sides of New Jersey avenue from Louisiana to Constitution avenue northwest.
5. Both sides of First street northeast, from Union Station Plaza to East Capitol street northeast.
6. Both sides of First street northeast, along west side of Union Station from Union Station Plaza to K street northeast.

8. Both sides of M street, from Union Station Plaza to Second street northeast.
9. Both sides of Massachusetts avenue, from Union Station Plaza to Second street northeast.
10. Both sides of D street, from Louisiana avenue northeast to Second street northeast.
11. Both sides of C street, from Delaware avenue to First street northeast.
12. Both sides of First street northwest, from Pennsylvania avenue to D street northwest.

17. Both sides of Madison place, from Pennsylvania avenue to H street northwest.

To Queen Elizabeth, Mrs. Hull said:

"Your Majesty:

"It is a great honor for me to meet and greet you."

The King wore a double-breasted blue suit, a blue shirt and dark blue tie, and carried a light felt hat. On his arrival tomorrow he will be wearing one of his gorgeous military or naval uniforms—which one, nobody in his entourage seems to know. The Queen, who, like the King, had changed twice during the day, wore the same blue lace dress she had worn in Ottawa when Their Majesties, for the first time in history, received members of the press. With it she wore a blue halo hat.

750,000 Greet Rulers at Niagara

In coming on to the soil of the great republic his ancestors lost, King George found no border guards, no frontier barriers, no Maginot or Siegfried lines—only a ceremonial guard of honor and a friendly Secretary of State who is the epitome of President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy.

As the King and Queen stood on Table Rock late today and looked down on the mighty cataract of Niagara, they saw a rainbow. It appeared to be a good augury for the American visit on which they were about to embark.

Behind the King and Queen is a 7,000-mile journey over their richest dominion which for demonstrations of loyalty and downright affection, has no equal in all history.

How many of Canada's 11,000,000 turned out to see them, to cheer them and to wave tiny Union Jacks is something that may never be computed.

Of course, it was a good show that pageantry-loving Great Britain put on for the Canadians. But it would be difficult to prove that mere curiosity brought out those millions all the way across the dominion.

If it had been that, why should they all have been waving Union Jacks? What about the fellow up in the James Oliver Curwood country, a solitary figure who sat out in his row boat with a Union Jack planted in the bow. He had no neighbors to see him demonstrate his loyalty. The flag, which probably cost him a week's income as a guide, was his own expression of loyalty to his British sovereigns.

The King and Queen arrived on the Canadian side of Niagara Falls after another triumphal day, a day which saw them traveling in a bright sunshine through incredibly enthusiastic crowds all the way from London, Ontario.

They detrained at St. Catharine's, got into one of their four maroon-colored cars and started on an 18-mile journey to Niagara Falls.

The greatest crowd in all the history of the famous honeymoon resort had gathered to welcome Their Majesties. Police estimated that its normal population of 18,000 had been swelled to 750,000. A good half of this number, no doubt, were Americans.

It was the greatest day Niagara had known since the great Blondin had walked across the falls on a wire in the presence of the King's grandfather, Edward VII.

King Dons Uniform of Field Marshal

King George broke out another new uniform for the occasion—the undress uniform of a field marshal, distinguished from the dress principally by the fact that it calls for a cap instead of the fore-and-aft hat with plumes.

It was hot and the Queen wore a dress of soft pale gray, and over it a light coat of the same hue.

She wore a minute hat of mauve and white lilac, from which fluttered a lilac veil.

When they reached Table Rock to witness the thundering cataract, they donned rubber mackintoshes, rubber helmets and boots.

Returning to their eight-room suite in the Brock Hotel—named for Gen. Isaac Brock, who died halting an American invasion of Canada in the War of 1812—Their Majesties prepared for their last dinner on Canadian soil before the journey to Washington.

Among the 35 guests were United States Minister Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Roper and John Farr Simmons, of the legation staff, who afterward accompanied the British sovereigns as far as the terminal on the other side of the bridge.

Rulers View Falls as They Dine

The King and Queen and the guests ate in the Rainbow room, and before them was spread the panorama of the falls which were illuminated in varied colors.

The menu included tenderloin of northern Ontario beef and baby guinea hen on canape.

As is customary, the King and Queen were waited on by their two red-coated footmen from Buckingham Palace, who saw to it that the sherry and the whisky came from His Majesty's own private stock.

The King and Queen waved to a great multitude from a balcony after the dinner, then went to their Buckingham Palace-on-wheels to start their epochal adventure in America.

Bow to Royalty Isn't a Problem To Va. Governor

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—Asked at his press conference today if he would bow and if Mrs. Price would curtsy to King George and Queen Elizabeth at Washington tomorrow, Governor Price said he and Virginia's first lady would meet "such exigencies as they arise."

The Governor and Mrs. Price will be guests at the British Embassy tomorrow at a reception for the King and Queen.

Workers at Geneva Back U. S. Peace Plea

Geneva, June 7 (AP).—Workers' delegates to the International Labor Conference adopted a resolution today approving President's Roosevelt's April 15 peace appeal to Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

The resolution urged the President to continue his efforts for peace through an economic conference.

Queen Reviews Boy and Girl Scouts Today

Her Majesty to Get Delicate Bouquet on White House Grounds

As their gift to Queen Elizabeth, who will review them this afternoon in the grounds south of the White House, Girl Scouts have selected a bouquet which to them symbols Her Majesty's delicate beauty.

It will be made of light blue forget-me-nots, dainty pastel shaded sweet peas, and sprays of lilies of the valley held together with a very pale pink cord tied in loops. It will be a hand bouquet.

Leah Burket, 15-year-old Linden, Md., girl, will make the presentation. More than 3,000 Girl Scouts will be assembled within the grounds, where approximately 7,000 Boy Scouts also will be reviewed.

The honor guard formed at the center of the long lines of Girl Scouts will be comprised of:

McGranery May Boycott George VI Over Russell Case

Representtative McGranery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said yesterday that 70 or 75 House members may boycott the Congressional reception for King George and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain because of the "grave injustice" involved in the arrest in Detroit Tuesday of Sean Russell, chief of staff of the Irish republican army.

Representative McGranery said President Roosevelt, apprised of Russell's arrest, promised to take up the matter immediately with the State Department.

McGranery and Representatives Smith (Democrat), of Connecticut, and Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio, told Mr. Roosevelt action of immigration authorities in holding Russell incommunicado "is inexcusable."

and out to the portico to await Their Majesties.

Whether the ladies of this group will curtsy is still a question, but there is a general impression abroad that most of them will not, preferring instead to greet the royal couple in a more American manner.

Among those who have been chosen to meet Their Majesties before the latter make their tour of the garden are Vice President and Mrs. Garner, Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the wartime President.

"Summer Whites" Permissible

Encouraged by Lady Lindsay's statement that "summer whites" would be as suitable for the garden party as cutaways and striped trousers, brave Capital males announced yesterday right and left that they were not going to be forced into formal attire. But most of the Cabinet members and other high officials are abiding by the State Department's notation of "formal dress" and will appear this once, if never before and never again, in apparel of the well-dressed Londoner.

The garden party will not only be the Capital's most important social event of the year; it is the only function on the royal schedule at which Their Majesties will have an opportunity to see Washington's cave dwellers in the mass, as well as the entire top layer of the Diplomatic Corps and a sizable slice of Washington officials.

Also, the fete will be one of three stanzas in the "swan song" for the retiring British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, who will soon bow out of the headlines they both dislike. Next month they will be off bag-and-baggage for England to make their home at Sir Ronald's picturesque country estate near Salisbury.

Meanwhile, they are responsible for the trio of functions at which Their Majesties will be hosts at the British Embassy during their Washington sojourn—the garden party today, the reception for British subjects in the morning, and the dinner in honor of President and Mrs. Roosevelt tomorrow night.

She'll Present Bouquet to the Queen

Snapping a brisk salute is Leah Burket, 15, of Linden, Md., Troop 51, who was selected from the Girl Scout Honor Guard for King George and Queen Elizabeth to present a bouquet of flowers to Her Majesty today at the White House when the royal couple reviews 3,000 Girl Scouts and 10,000 Boy Scouts

House grounds at 2:30 p. m. in the role of—almost—ordinary tourists.

Guides on the high-speed sightseeing tour will be Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt. The itinerary includes the Lincoln Memorial, a leafy corner of Rock Creek Park and Washington Cathedral, but exact times and routes are a secret.

At Mount St. Alban's the royal visitors will find an atmosphere as English as the British Embassy—quiet lawns and gardens, a "bishop's palace" and a Cathedral school in the shadow of the great Gothic church.

The King is expected to step inside the cathedral, with a minimum of ceremony, and place a wreath at the tomb of Woodrow Wilson in Bethlehem Chapel. Cathedral grounds will be open to the general public during the royal visit, which will take place about 3:15 p. m.

To Review Scouts

Ninety minutes later the King and Queen will review more than 10,000 Boy and Girl Scouts of Washington, Maryland and Virginia, massed on either side of the south drive across the White House grounds.

From the welcome of their fellow Scouts, the monarch and his consort will drive a parade pace out Connecticut and Massachusetts avenues to the British Embassy garden party.

A state dinner at the White House will bring to a close the sovereigns' first day in Washington. The evening leads from diamond-back terrapin on the banquet menu to spirituals and hill-billy music in the East Room.

Sovereigns' Visit Will Cost U. S. Under $30,000

The visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth will cost the Government less than $30,000, official sources said yesterday.

This computation was made as a result of assertions attributed to Representative Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio, that the cost would approximate $250,000.

A large part of the cost will come out of the $25,000-a-year White House allowance for entertainment.

The State Department is not increasing its staff. The White House is taking on additional help. Army and Navy will be out a little expense, chiefly for fuel. The Secret Service is bringing in 50 or more men from its out-of-town offices.

King to Board Potomac in Style

Marines presenting arms. At the gangplank of the Potomac, the President will be greeted by a bugle sounding "attention," Rear Admiral George Pettengill, commandant of the yard, and his staff will salute, and the Marine guard will present arms. The Navy Band will give four flourishes and ruffles and then play the "Star-Spangled Banner."

As a boatswain's mate pipes a shrill long whistle, the President will board the ship. Eight sailors, called "sideboys," will line the gangplank, and the crew will "man the rail" facing shoreward. The captain will greet the President as he reaches the deck. Originally, it had been planned to dispense with this ceremony for the President's arrival but earnest pleas of the newsreel men caused a change in plans.

The King and Queen will arrive at the yard about noon. On their entering, "attention" will be sounded by the bugler, and the 21-gun national salute will boom out. Driving through the line of sailors and Marines, the King will receive the same honors as the President, except the band will play "God Save the King."

from Government agencies.

In contrast to the tea, at which rank will be forgotten in a discussion of the country's problems, the boat trip to Mount Vernon tomorrow will be "strictly official," with protocol and formality again taking the upper hand. There will be about 25 in the party, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

Questioned about her wardrobe for the first day's visit of Their Majesties, Mrs. Roosevelt casually revealed that the blue wool dress she dons to wear to Union Station this morning will probably be worn all day, "unless it gets too warm." If it does, she probably will change to a linen or silk frock for the sightseeing tour.

The First Lady said that when she leaves for Hyde Park Friday night, it will be "for the summer." She added, however, that she would stop here en route to Richmond early in July. She will go there to present the Spingarn medal to Marian Anderson at a convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Announcing an addition to the program of entertainment at the Hyde Park picnic for the King and Queen, she said that Ish-Ti-Opi, Indian barytone from Oklahoma, would share the program with the Indian Princess Te-Ata.

Librarian Of Congress

It is very doubtful that Archibald MacLeish can justly be accused of being a "fellow traveler" of the Communist Party, as Representative Thomas, of New Jersey, asserted yesterday. Mr. MacLeish is a poet, writer and editor of much distinction. As such he may very properly have a normal interest in Communism as a vital factor of the age. But there seems no ground for any more damaging conclusion on this score.

All this furor is entirely beside the point in discussing Mr. MacLeish's qualifications for the important position of Librarian of Congress, to which he has been nominated by President Roosevelt to succeed Dr. Herbert Putnam. For forty years Dr. Putnam has served in this capacity with such distinction that it is almost impossible for anyone really to replace him. The question is whether Mr. MacLeish may be expected to prove as competent a successor as can be expected.

In making the announcement, the President pointed out that the position has been hard to fill because of the variety of qualifications needed. But he concluded that Mr. MacLeish, "a gentleman and a scholar," would live up to the arduous requirements.

Mr. MacLeish's literary work is certainly widely and most favorably known. He has yet to prove beyond debate that he has the more important and vital qualifications of unusual administrative and technical ability. The issue is not whether Mr. MacLeish has occasionally traveled with parlor Bolsheviks but whether he has the skill and endurance to travel permanently as Librarian of Congress.

The State Of Business

Rumors of new plans for speeding up recovery tend to create the impression that business is going from bad to worse. That assumption is happily belied by the current trade and production indices. In April the adjusted index of industrial production of the Federal Reserve Board stood at 92 per cent of the 1923/25 average. Compared with the index of 77 per cent recorded in April, 1938, that indicates a very substantial degree of recovery from the depression levels of a year ago.

However, there has been a marked drop from the level of activity last December, when an index of 104 was attained. It appears that the continuous downward trend of recent months, coupled with recurrent war scares and labor disturbances, has accentuated pessimism.

The failure of an expected business upturn to materialize in the early spring has been particularly disappointing. The lack of a seasonal pickup in the steel industry, and the less than seasonal increase in automobile production in March and April, are emphasized in the Federal Reserve Board's last monthly business survey. The board also refers to the less than seasonal increase in non-agricultural employment.

Since the period to which reference is made in the latest Reserve Board report, the business picture has changed for the better. Steel operations have turned upward since mid-May, and automobile production has held up well in spite of labor troubles. Manufacturers' orders in many lines are also increasing, with the abatement of war scares. In short, the business picture is by no means one of unrelieved gloom. Indeed, it is in many respects rather promising, judged from the viewpoint of the statistical analyst.

Paradoxical though it seems, the anxiety now manifested in official circles about the slow pace of recovery has probably been heightened by the relatively high degree of activity now prevailing. If business operations were at the depression levels of a year ago, some comfort might be extracted from the belief that the next upturn would provide a solution for various pressing economic problems. But as business improves without providing adequate employment, or reducing the pressure upon the Government to provide benefits for various distressed groups, anxiety also mounts.

It becomes increasingly plain that a major expansion of investment activities is needed to provide the basis for a sustained recovery. The evidences of depression are not to be found in the trade and production indices, but in the figures of new capital issues put out by industrial corporations. They provide the chief explanation of the high degree of chronic unemployment, and they reflect the disquiet with which many businessmen look toward the future.

The Royal Visit

King George and Queen Elizabeth crossed an unfortified border into this country last night and spent the intervening time—restfully we hope—traveling through States which were three of the thirteen original American colonies. They arrive this morning, as every school child knows, for a brief stay in the Capital of the United States. As everyone also knows, this is the first time that a reigning British monarch has ever set foot on what, without offense to other New World nations, we are accustomed to call American soil.

The precedent now created accounts for no small part of the warm and truly affectionate welcome which will be extended to Their Majesties for the duration of this eagerly awaited visit. The American people are not unaware of the compliment which it implies and are hospitably anxious to reciprocate. Much more than idle curiosity lies behind the deep desire of tens of thousands to catch even a glimpse of the royal couple and thereby add their individual notes to the great chorus of national greeting.

The coming of the King and Queen is, of course, a natural by-product of their Canadian tour. This is emphasized by the fact that they are accompanied by the Premier of Canada as Minister in Attendance. George VI is King of Canada as well as King of Great Britain. It is in the former capacity rather than the latter that he comes here today. But these fine constitutional distinctions will not impress the enthusiastic spectators who will line the route to the White House this morning. To them the occasion is nothing less than a state visit by the pair who reign over all of Great Britain's far-flung empire.

In reaching this conclusion the crowd, as so often happens, will be nearer the truth than those who chop logic and weigh phrases. Whether or not King George and Queen Elizabeth came to the New World primarily to visit Washington, the fact is that today they are here. And their presence unquestionably symbolizes the dawning of a new era in world history.

It is an era, already well over the horizon, in which the strength, the character and the moral power of the United States have become factors of decisive importance to civilization. The negligible string of colonies which broke away from Great Britain more than a century and a half ago has grown into what is potentially the mightiest of all the nations. In the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth there is a tacit and a flattering recognition of this fact. It will be emphasized by the wreath which the King will lay tomorrow on the tomb of George Washington.

Americans, by and large, are anything but an arrogant people. They are less conscious of their collective strength than is the rest of the world. They are more diffident in asserting their national power than are some whose claim to the respect of mankind is far less justifiable. It is not extension or assertion of empire, but stabilization and perfection of our civilization, which is the American objective. What we call isolationism is often merely an expression of an almost unduly humble national attitude.

But the American people also realize that they are inevitably a tremendous factor in the modern world. They realize, more and more clearly, that whether we act or whether we fail to act our power of itself is serving as a prime determinant of history. And with that realization comes a growing determination to have the United States play a truly constructive role in this difficult era, to exert positive leadership and to fulfill all the responsibilities which, in national as in individual life, are an inescapable concomitant of power.

The visit of Great Britain's King and Queen will subtly strengthen this determination. Behind the pomp and circumstance of their high office the simplicity and modesty of the royal couple can clearly be discerned. It is in keeping with these characteristics that they have come to the United States. And if the manner of their coming attests the British Empire's recognition of America's stature, it also emphasizes the high duties which that stature implies.

The Capital of the United States is proud to welcome this attractive couple. Like the rest of the country, Washington places full value on the rich heritage of institutions and ideals which stem from our British origin. Like the rest of the country, Washington understands how much the British tradition means in a period when there is serious threat to ideals which the two countries hold in common. Like the rest of the country, also, Washington appreciates the realization of King George and Queen Elizabeth, shared by their innumerable subjects, that the United States has come of age, and has a great maturity before it.

With the democracy of equals; with the fraternity of family relationship; and with the pride inseparable from mutual understanding and respect, the sovereign city of the United States today acclaims the sovereigns of the British Empire.

Hitler And Franco

In the speeches of welcome made by Adolf Hitler and Field Marshal Goering to the Condor Legion on its return from Spain, what little remained of the pretense that Germany never officially intervened in the Spanish struggle was cynically cast aside.

That pretense has now served its purpose. It provided British and French government leaders with the necessary pretext for inaction. It gave a measure of verisimilitude to Germany's demonstrably insincere acceptance of the non-intervention agreement. And it also helped persuade many poor dupes in democratic countries that the non-intervention scheme was what it pretended to be, instead of being merely a screen for large-scale Nazi intervention.

Now, however, it suits Hitler's purpose to emphasize the official German aid rendered Franco and to emphasize, as well, the invaluable nature of that assistance.

"In July, 1936," the Fuehrer told the Condor Legion, "I decided to fulfill the request made by Franco, and I allowed German volunteers to take an active part in fighting for National Spain . . . One of the reasons responsible for my decision was the fact that Spain, during the World War, in spite of blackmailing attempts by Britain, continued to maintain her friendly neutrality towards Germany."

This time there was not a word about Germany's pledge to keep her hands off the Spanish struggle and none of the earlier denials that Germany had any political interest in the civil war. Instead, there is the proud boast that German intervention was by order of the Fuehrer himself.

"I sent you out to help an unhappy country," said Hitler to the Condor Legion. "You return as brave executors of my command."

In other words, Hitler willed it. And he kept on willing it throughout the long period that his officials and his puppet press were protesting to high Heaven that Germany was wholly innocent of intervention.

Vicarious War

Recent fighting along the Mongolian-Manchukuo border proves that buffer states do not always serve their intended purpose, but rather help bring on the very dangers they are designed to avert.

Manchukuo is to Japan what Outer Mongolia is to Russia. Both of these Chinese provinces have been wrested from that country and made into nominally independent nations. Actually they are puppet states with the strings held by imperialist Japan, on the one hand, and by imperialist Russia on the other.

Nor does the parallel end there. Manchukuo is a barrier protecting Japan and Korea against attack from Soviet Siberia; Outer Mongolia is a barrier in the way of Japan's encroachment upon the region south and east of Lake Baikal. Thus guarded on their respective flanks by buffer states, Russia and Japan, it would seem, might live at peace with one another.

But, as innumerable skirmishes along the Mongolian-Manchukuo frontier seem to indicate, the buffers have ceased to be buffers and now represent actual extension of Japanese and Russian sovereignty. So that the fighting in question is, to all intents and purposes, a struggle between units of the Japanese Empire and the Soviet Union at a new point of contact between those nations.

The only saving factor is that the fiction of Manchukuoan and Outer Mongolian independence enables Moscow and Tokyo to be at war and at peace at one and the same time. Both capitals can feel out each other's strength along this border, at a cost largely limited to the lives of their helpless Chinese vassals.

Immortal

Francisco Sarabia, Mexico's leading flier and holder of the Mexico City-New York City speed record, has made his last flight. The fatal accident yesterday was a grim finale to a good-will tour which every American welcomed and which Mexico properly regarded with a keen feeling of national pride. And it marked the end of a brilliant and promising career.

The tragedy was made all the more heart-rending because it occurred in full view of Sarabia's wife and little son, as well as of official representatives of the Mexican republic which honored him as a gallant and distinguished citizen.

Sarabia is gone. He has joined the long list of adventurous spirits who, throughout recorded history, have sacrificed their lives in the never-ending effort to establish man's mastery over the elements. Throughout this country there is the most profound sympathy for his family and his friends. Their consolation must be that the spirit which Sarabia exemplified is immortal and unconquerable.

Wonder why nature fashioned a set of ears large enough for an elephant calf and then finished the job with a hound dog.

Streamlined cars are all right, but too many persons with streamlined foreheads are driving them.

Less Din

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since we Washingtonians are looking forward with great enthusiasm to the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain and planning for their comfort and happiness could we not include in our program a campaign for quieter automobile driving? A scientific study made several years ago revealed that Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest was one of the noisiest corners in the United States. One has every reason to believe that in spite of this knowledge this street corner is still just as noisy.

In the City of London it is against the law to sound an automobile horn except in an emergency. No horn blowing is allowed between 12 o'clock at night and 7 in the morning. This law is obeyed. One can stay at the largest hotels in the most crowded sections of the city and not be kept awake at night by automobile horns.

As another tribute to our royal guests from London could we compensate in ways other than horn-blowing and discipline our petulance if only for a few days and thus spare the taut nervous systems of the British King and Queen.

Road Hogs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One often hears it said these days that it is more dangerous to drive slowly than to drive fast. Like most generalities, that statement has some glaring inadequacies. Certainly it is not true that a collision between two slow moving cars is as productive of frightful tragedy as one between vehicles traveling at a high rate of speed.

The truth of the matter undoubtedly is that there is too much fast driving for conditions and quite a bit that is too slow.

"For conditions" should qualify every consideration of the subject of motor car speeds. With that qualification in mind, slow driving is receiving the close study of motor vehicle and traffic authorities in all parts of the country.

It is not only his speed that makes the road hog a dangerous nuisance on the modern highway. It is a combination of speed and position. If he keeps in his proper place to the right hand side of the highway, a driver's rate of travel does not make so much difference. Most motorists will admit that they have no antipathy for the slow driver provided he does not obstruct the lane in which they normally pass him.

It is this fact that may delay the wholesale enactment of minimum speed limit regulations by the various States.

But the fact remains that there is a growing sentiment against road hogging as one of traffic's greatest evils.

WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The tax system should be used to encourage the conversion of income into goods and services. Take the tax off improvements to real estate and increase them on the capital value of land. That would make land easier to buy, and make a building boom and lower rents. Make all income taxes personal, thus exempting small stockholders who will spend what they get. Give large exemptions for spending and donations, and make the tax on unspent income very high. Then people would either buy something with their surplus incomes, or Uncle Sam would do it for them. With a higher rate of consumption, there would be better business and more employment.

Oil In Chile

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to make the following statement with reference to your editorial entitled, "Alienating Capital," published June 1 in your excellent newspaper:

Law 5124, approved in 1932, authorizes the Chilean government to establish a state monopoly for the sale and distribution of petroleum products in Chile.

This law will be put into effect after a complete understanding is reached with the companies established in Chile—the West India Oil Co. and the Dutch-Shell—which, of course, have known of the existence of the law since its passage by the Congress seven years ago.

Conversations with respect to the entering into effect of this law are taking place between the government and the companies involved, and according to reports by the Associated Press my government is planning to float an internal loan to pay for such values as may be acquired by the government from the companies.

However, the Chilean government has not yet set a time limit within which the companies must liquidate their holdings. As you know, Chile is not a petroleum producing country, and has no refineries. Thus it will be obliged to import the petroleum products it consumes from foreign countries, and what is more, buy from the West India and the Dutch-Shell, as it does today.

Trade And Debts

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some legislators seem to favor increased duties on importations These statesmen should judge each individual case carefully. Has anyone heard that England and France discontinued business relations with Germany even though there are threats of war?

In regard to Japan, we have had a favorable trade balance with that country for many seasons. In 1938 it amounted to around $115,000,000, whereas other nations in the past have sold us considerably more than they purchased.

Why did some members of Congress remain silent while Mexico confiscated American oil, sugar and other properties? Some desire the price of silver kept at a high rate so as to benefit their State, while they should give more serious consideration to our cotton problem. In other instances, many have probably forgotten that years ago Russia dumped millions of tons of wheat in European markets, even though her own people needed the foodstuff. Their action caused our grain prices to collapse.

Why not make an attempt to collect some of the billions of dollars due us from foreign nations? It would undoubtedly aid in solving our home conditions. To devise ways and means to secure jobs for our 10,000,000 unemployed, should, in my opinion, be of utmost importance to this country.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one of the large party that came over to America in the interests of Moral Rearmament, I would like to thank you for the excellent report and picture of last night's meeting in Constitution Hall. I am sending out copies of your paper to friends in many parts of the world.

This is the new thinking that people seem to be waiting for everywhere. The response is really overwhelming.

Mr. Pegler Is Chastised

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just finished reading Pegler's remarks about Tom Mooney. I am wondering what bedazzlement he possesses that intrigues editors into accepting and publishing under a by-line mouthings that if turned out by a cub would be thrown into the waste paper basket. At this late date, Pegler, whose anti-union bias is scarcely concealed, brings out the old bromide about union organizers being afraid of a good day's work—a libel to which millions of men and women in the trade unions have answered forthrightly.

Unfortunately, because of the immunity granted columnists, Pegler's remarks were published.

As for Tom Mooney working, it so happens that for the last 22 years, the prisoner at San Quentin was a fellow practitioner of Pegler's, both achieving some prominence in the field of public letters. If their output is to be measured by effectiveness, Pegler remains what he was at the beginning, a sophomoric writer. Tom Mooney's name, on the other hand, became a byword in the world-wide struggle for freedom. Not only did Mooney write for himself and Billings, but he was an effective pamphleteer for other victims of injustice, Sacco and Vanzetti among them.

Mooney, one might say looking at his almost incredible record of hundreds of thousands of letters, has done his work—he is entitled to a rest. But he knows, as others know, including Mr. Westbrook Pegler, that he cannot have that rest as long as Warren K. Billings is not free. When that task is completed, it is certain that a man like Mooney will find other work to do, for those who enlist on the side of the angels enlist for the duration of the war.

Mr. Pegler seems a little resentful of the fact that Tom Mooney is enjoying himself now. Of course he is, as few men ever enjoy themselves, for it is not given to many to receive the adulation of millions. Of course he is enjoying himself, and why shouldn't he? If we could give him an ovation every day for the remainder of his life, we still could not make up to him for those years he spent in prison.

What would any of us take in exchange for the years between 30 and 50. There is actually nothing we can do now for Tom Mooney, but it is a tribute to his greatness—or shall we say to the cause he made his own—that he came out of prison, not an embittered old man but a youthful fighter in freedom's ranks. He is receiving the thanks of millions of men and women who, seeing Tom Mooney, can take heart again; and it is just possible that he considers himself well-paid.

RUTH CRAWFORD.

Washington, June 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read Mr. Pegler's column in The Post of June 6 and wish to voice my protest at the disgusting sentiments which he expressed concerning Tom Mooney. The Post would be a better paper if it rid itself of Mr. Pegler's column. While I believe that anyone has a right to express his point of view, the vulgarity of Mr. Pegler is shocking to good taste.

'Oh, To Be In England!'

THE OTHER DAY, finding myself with an idle half hour on my hands in which all I had to do was sit or stand or lie around with my teeth in my mouth, worrying over national and international things, I decided I would spend the time in foreign travel. I had taken these trips before and they had cost me much time and beaucoup d'argent. I decided that this once I should manage entirely without money, either the folding or the jingling kind.

I glanced over my mental map and began placing things. Soon I was in the lake region of England, which is a bit of Scotland that skidded. I was there without having known the slightest mal de mer or found anything wrong with the menu or my table companions. I had not even been annoyed by the necessity for tipping the deck steward or what stewards have you. Boots had not importuned me the last evening on board. I had not, as I had before, been compelled to wait a long time at some little junction outside Liverpool for a train up through Lancashire toward the land of meres and waters and becks and tarns and pikes—that is, lakes, small lakes, brooks, quarry-girt ponds and furze-encrusted peaks. I was in Bownes, on the south end of Lake Windermere, at a comfortable hotel, but went immediately out on the lake for a leisurely and wind-swept toy steamer ride to nowhere and back. But I had stopped a bit at Wordsworth's Ambleside. Then I had taken a hired car and visited Coniston of Ruskin memory; had done Hawkshead and Dove Cottage where (a) Wordsworth went to school and whittled the benches, and where (b) he and Dorothy lived at Grasmere. This was also where Coleridge, DeQuincey and others (according to their brags; I never for a minute believed them) used to stage their laudanum-drinking regattas.

I visited Ruskin's workshop and museum at Coniston. I tried to drop a tear on his grave, but the wind was blowing and the tear lit on some total and equally dead stranger. Not the first wasted tear, however—that fact comforted me. I found that Ruskin had been a versatile chap—leather work, woodwork, even water colors were in his repertoire. If there was ever anybody who could "play a concertina under water" it would be either he or the late F. Hopkinson Smith.

I climbed tors, I imagined myself at Dartmoor with hound-hunted Grimpen Mire near by, I ate English food without getting indigestion, I visited the church—up there at some "water" or another—where Southey was buried. I recalled the marvelous poem that had been Mc-Guffeyed into me—"How Does the Water Come Down at Lodore?" I met the old sexton who took care of the grave of the famous poet. We proved to be of very understandably little interest to one another.

I even—from Stoke Poges, which I reached in less than a second from 200 miles away—went to the home of "Dizzy" d'Israeli, near Beaconsfiled (which you MUST NOT call Bea-consfield, because it is Beckensfield), saw the birthplace of Shelley, near Maidenhead, visited the Burnham Beaches, went to Jordan's Chapel where Billy Penn became a Quaker, learned that Billy himself was born in the backyard of the church—St. Giles Stoke Poges—in whose yard Gray said he wrote the "Elegy," though he didn't. And then I went to Chalfonte St. Giles, where Jordan's Chapel also is, to see the Milton home. Milton had taken refuge in this house when he fled the plague in London. And his 13-year-old daughter, Debby, must have thought they had done a heluva job of escaping the plague, when every time her blind papa thought of a new hard-to-parse line for "Paradise Regained" (he finished "Paradise Lost" in that house, and began its equally tough successor)—no matter what time of night it might be, that poor 13-year-old, sleep-soggy kid had to get up and write it down!

I sat in Gray's crypt on the Gray estate whence, before the trees grew so high, he could actually see "The Distant Spires of Eton Towers" (just under the wall of Windsor Castle), of which he wrote right there. He also probably wrote most of the "Elegy" there, too, as he was nine years writing it, and no guy—even a fellow goofy enough to be a poet—ever sat in anybody's churchyard nine years.

I saw again the bicycle window in the St. Giles Church—a stained glass affair designed for some occult reason before there was a bike in the world. I saw also the "lepers' window," where the lepers of the neighborhood stick their ears up to a hole in the wall to hear the sermon without contaminating the rest of the congregation.

I even played golf on the Stoke Poges Country Club links and understand in a new way the meaning of "where heaved the turf." I sure heaved it with my mashie. My caddy, a deadpan 40-year-old cockney, insulted me grossly by saying:

"You moight try y'r put-ter for that 'proach, sir. The perspe-rytion on yer 'ands mykes th' shawf't hof yer niblick turn, hit does. Hand h'Ive noticed that hit mykes little differ which club you huse for hany stroke, sir."

Ouch!

I asked him his name, just then. I asked it with ominous calm.

"Sharleymyne, sir."

"Go on," I said, "your name saves you."

Yes, I took that big trip without expense, uneasiness as to my travel budget, footsoreness, aggravation, home-sickness, jingoism, international jealousy, resentment over Great Britain's non-payment of war debts—all in a little less than half an hour!

Who that has been abroad at any time among the school-reader settings need spend a cent or several weeks in giving himself a fine, happy foreign tour?

Advice To Witnesses

IN A STATEMENT on the iniquity of labor espionage and the maintenance of private armies Senator La Follette reported that great corporations had stripped and even destroyed correspondence files which his committee desired to inspect and that some witnesses made piecemeal answers. He was indignant about this, and the tone of his complaint was such as to create the impression that an American citizen or corporation is under some obligation to co-operate with the prosecution when placed in the role of defendant by a Congressional committee.

This conflicts with the best legal advice and recalls a remark made by Mr. John Flynn one afternoon when there was a lull in the munitions inquiry. The investigation had gone into the office files of various companies and had spread on the record and the pages of the newspapers intimate correspondence which, though not incriminating, was distinctly embarrassing and of a character roughly comparable to the sophomore crush notes which sometimes are read in open court to the excruciating misery of middle-aged businessmen in actions for divorce or breach of promise.

Confidential Notes Should Be Destroyed

"THESE BUSINESSMEN," Mr. Flynn said, "are so dumb that they must get rich by luck alone. Can you imagine a smart man leaving that kind of stuff in his files?"

Office correspondence is not written for public consumption. It may be very confidential without being illegal, and its publication may create bitter enmity on the part of persons who are discussed candidly under the seal of confidence. It may reveal commercial secrets which are not public business and contain uncomplimentary observations on the personalities and methods of competitors, customers or politicians. Thus it would seem to be wise, if papers are subject to subpena, to keep the files free of all but the most formal records and to resist the temptation to douse with lavender and tie up with baby ribbon those intimacies which often are put on paper, perhaps hastily and without thought as to how they would sound in print, by which businessmen try to give one another "the lowdown" or "the picture."

Subpenas Should Be Used With Restraint

TO STRIP or destroy correspondence before subpena would seem to be the privilege of individuals and private business, and if subpenas are to command respect they should be used with restraint for the purpose of obtaining legitimate information and not to make publicity and political capital for statesmen or to harass political opponents.

As to the reluctance of witnesses to babble on beyond the scope of the questions which are put to them, it may be said that the Dies Committee has been in trouble ever since it began its inquiry because it didn't cramp witnesses and did permit them to use the hearings as a sounding board for sensational and sometimes silly speeches. If a witness attempts to enlarge his answer in justice to his position he may be accused of trying to make a speech and called to order, but, on the other hand, if he doesn't he may be accused of delivering piecemeal answers and obstructing the inquiry.

A former Attorney General of the United States once wrote some succinct advice to an individual who was about to be summoned to an inquiry.

"Don't lose your nerve," he said, "and don't lose your temper. Answer only such questions as are pertinent to the legal and legitimate inquiry, and, of course, volunteer no information. If you have anything to tell, tell the truth, and that only in response to legal inquiry. Claim every privilege, hold your chin up and fear no one or anything."

Resist Temptation To Expand Answers

A WISE WITNESS will resist the temptation to expand his answers when he finds himself in the role of the accused, but without the benefit of a formal accusation which at least defines his status and gives him the protection that is ordinarily accorded defendants. And even a defendant under formal charge in a court will be cautioned by his counsel not to engage in repartee or swing out into space with the explanatory remarks any observations which seem to him to be clever but may give the prosecutor ideas.

The Congressional type of inquiry is capable of errors or overzeal and political ambition or partisanship, and unless the hearings are conducted with scrupulous fairness an inquiry intended to ascertain facts may be an inquisition bent on discovering and publishing heresy.

British And American Relations

LORD LOTHIAN

THE BREACH made in the unity of the English-speaking world by the revolution of 1776 was far more due to defects in the constitutional system of government both in Britain and in North America than later generations have realized.

The fundamental cause of the quarrel was the immense cost to the British taxpayer of the wars against France and the Indians, the unwillingness of the colonists to contribute to that cost, though they were the principal beneficiaries, and the natural but fatal determination of King George III to try to compel them to do so.

The real reason why the colonists would not contribute was because, while each colony possessed a representative legislature, there was no representative assembly of the American colonies as a whole empowered to consider their common North American affairs. These were dealt with from London. Their outlook, therefore, tended to be limited by the boundaries of their own states.

Even after independence it took eight years of bitter disillusionment, frustration, and disaster to convince them that they had to create a common federal Government. And the real reason why King George III was able to defy, in the case of his American subjects, the tradition established by the Cromwellian Revolution, that there should be no taxation without representation, was because, by exploiting his own patronage and that of his "friends" who controlled the "rotten boroughs," he was able to defeat Chatham and Edmund Burke and evade the principle established at the Revolution of 1688 that the King could only govern with the consent of a Parliament intended to represent the national view.

Split Was Inevitable

BUT WHILE American historians now give the fairest account of the weakness of the colonists' case and British historians are among the warmest supporters of George Washington and of the rebellion against taxation without consent, it was, in fact, inevitable that the two peoples should each take control of their own destinies.

Nature, in the shape of 3,000 miles of restless ocean, crossed only by tiny wooden sailing ships, forbade, as Burke said, any form of common representation in Parliament. Federalism had not been invented. And that almost painless path to independent nationhood known as dominion status had not been discovered.

Moreover, once the turmoil of the eighteenth century wars passed away, and the long century of world peace began, the primary interests of the two countries began to diverge.

On the one hand were the vigorous, free-minded Americans of the New World conscious of the vast destiny which awaited their still unexplored country, eager to develop it and only too anxious to have done with the wars and dynastic and social complications of the Old World. On the other side England was still mainly controlled by the landowning classes, who were interested in individual freedom but not democracy, and its government was inevitably preoccupied with the international politics of the time. For the history of that age largely centered on the tremendous and revolutionary consequences of the expansion of Europe all over the globe which followed the discovery of America by Columbus and of the route to the Orient round the Cape of Good Hope by Vasco da Gama.

America Looked West

BEFORE the Revolution this vast process of European expansion over the static civilizations of the Orient and the primitive peoples of Africa and America had affected both sides of the Atlantic in very much the same way. For the diplomatic struggles, the trade rivalries, and the wars first with Spain and later with France were largely concerned with the future of North America. But with the close of the Napoleonic era and the brief and unnecessary war of 1812 this common concern disappeared.

The United States, especially under Jefferson and Andrew Jackson, abandoned the relatively aristocratic traditions of the early Federal period and began to make those experiments with democracy which, with the enactment of that wonderful construction, the first Federal Constitution known to history, have been her principal contributions to political science.

Then in response to Canning's initiative she affirmed, but as a unilateral policy of her own, the Monroe Doctrine that political encroachment by Europe in the Americas would not be tolerated, with the implied corollary that she intended to avoid entanglement herself in Europe's affairs.

Her energies became absorbed in the gigantic and stimulating task of annexing and populating the great West, in helping its inhabitants to organize themselves into States, which in due time became members of the Union, and in equipping the whole country with houses and farms, roads, railways, and ships, factories, schools, and universities. She opened her doors to the dispossessed and the enterprising of Europe, who crossed the Atlantic in millions to enjoy the freedom and opportunity of the New World. The epic of the covered wagon and the heroism of the pioneer, together with the energy and constructive capacity of the capitalist entrepreneur and the gigantic wealth and the dynamic economic civilization they built between them, made democracy, the rights of man, and "rugged individualism" the accepted and sufficient gospel of all classes for a century.

British History Different

THE HISTORY of Great Britain was quite different. She also continued her attachment to personal liberty. She was profoundly but more slowly affected by the new democratic spirit which blew in from the west. The reform act of 1832 transferred political power to the middle class, the acts of 1867 and 1884 to the working man, and the act of 1919 gave votes to women as well as men.

In external affairs Great Britain, also, after the Napoleonic wars, endeavored to practice "splendid isolation" from the wars and quarrels of Europe. But it was always a qualified isolation, dependent upon her being able to maintain an invincible navy, with bases all over the world.

It was this control of the seas, the so-called Pax Britannica, which prevented world war for a century, and made possible the greatest expansion of freedom and prosperity the world has ever known. It prevented world war, though not local European and Far Eastern wars, because no continental nation which did not possess a navy strong enough to challenge the British navy could reach any oversea territory or force Great Britain herself into war.

It made possible the expansion of freedom and prosperity because it not only insulated the American republics from serious international trouble, but because, war being always the greatest enemy to freedom, the peace it created enabled self-government and prosperity to develop, not only in Britain herself, but throughout her oversea possessions.

Imperialist Tide Reversed

THUS GRADUALLY the tide of European imperialism began to be reversed. Canada, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand and, far too late, Ireland, became in effect independent nations, while India, Ceylon, Burma and other territories are now far on the road to autonomy, and Egypt and Iraq are sovereign states in treaty relations with Britain.

And because Great Britain adhered to free trade and used her sea power with relative liberality and moderation, and because migration was still free, there took place that unexampled economic development which raised the standard of living in the west three or four times higher than had ever before been known before, and there was no serious international opposition to the British system of stabilizing the world.

Yet during the whole of the century, the official relations between England and America, while correct, were seldom cordial. For this there were many reasons. On the one hand that element in the tradition of the glorious Revolution which pictured Britain as the hated and brutal oppressor, intrenched in school books and Fourth of July oratory, took an unconscionably long time in dying, for it was the background to American nationhood. For a century, too, the United States had no serious diplomatic problems with any other power than that which somewhat arbitrarily contested the American doctrine of the freedom of the seas.

On the other hand, the revolution left its mark on Britain also, where there were some who were jealous of the success of the runaway daughter, while the aristocratic classes, consciously and unconsciously, felt the menace to their own authority implicit in the social equality and the democratic institutions across the Atlantic.

Never was this more clearly shown than during the Civil War, when conservatives in Britain tended to sympathize with the South, while the still unenfranchised cotton operatives of Lancashire, though thrown out of work by the war, were among the most ardent supporters of Abraham Lincoln.

It was not until Theodore Roosevelt and Elihu Root were in office in Washington, and Sir Edward Grey was foreign secretary in London, with James Bryce as Ambassador in Washington, at a time when the United States found imperial responsibilities thrust upon it as the result of the Spanish-American war, and the construction of the German navy opened a new era of international unrest, that official relations began to grow cordial.

What Democracy Implies

FOR A TIME it seemed that the World War of 1914-18 would lead to a permanent restoration of the active influence of both English-speaking peoples in world affairs.

Democracy implies that the underlying appeal in public life is to reason and moral principle and not to force. The invasion of Belgium, the sinking of the Lusitania and the rapidly growing conviction that France and Britain and the young British nations across the seas stood for the same ideas of freedom as the United States, while Imperial Germany stood for autocratic domination, did far more to drive the United States into a decisive intervention on the Allied side, when victory was much in doubt, than the direct challenge to its own interests by the unlimited German submarine campaign which precipitated it. And it was Wilson's speeches, with their vision of a new and nobler world order, which crystalized in magnificent eloquence for the whole world the purposes of the democracies in the conflict.

The rejection of the League of Nations and the withdrawal of the United States from political co-operation in post-war reconstruction seemed for a time to destroy this prospect and to cloud mutual understanding. There was bitterness in England that she should have been left, with France, to shoulder alone the tremendous burden of bringing world order out of world chaos.

The non-payment of war debts and the feeling, as the nations renewed their strife and dictatorship began to appear, that the prodigious intervention in favor of democracy had been in vain, produced a deep disillusionment in the United States. She endeavored to consolidate her isolation from the rest of the world by a neutrality act designed to insure that, even if there was another European war, she would not be drawn into it by economic entanglements.

Nations Drawing Closer

BUT DESPITE this divergence in policy the underlying unity which must always exist between two countries whose political ideals are equally concerned to develop the freedom of man, though with much different emphasis, reasserted itself.

Both have eschewed vehement panaceas for dealing with the inequalities produced by unrestricted capitalism and with the unemployment caused by growing barriers to international trade and the world depression, and have trusted to democratic methods of social reform. Especially since Ireland won her freedom and the dominions took their place as new nations the dual picture of England in the American mind—half tyrant oppressor of other people, half the home of Magna Carta, the Bill of Rights, of Shakespeare, Milton, and the law and spirit of freedom—has begun to lose its sinister aspect.

On the other side, the old jealousy of the United States in Britain has disappeared so that acceptance of naval equality with her—an impossibility before the World War—met little criticism, while there is wholehearted admiration of her historic statesmen like Washington and Abraham Lincoln, and of her achievements in education, in scientific discovery and research, and in economic construction and enterprise. Heavy taxation of the rich and a completely democratic House of Commons are rapidly nullifying those social distinctions from which Americans instinctively recoil.

Lately even the divergence in external policy has begun to lessen also. The Munich crisis revealed to the United States that British sea power was no longer the insurmountable barrier to foreign interference in the Americas that it used to be, and that neutrality is no certain insulation against war. It revealed to Great Britain how deeply her old position in the world has been challenged by air power and the anti-Comintern pact. Both have decisively rejected the philosophy and methods of the military dictatorships and are arming vigorously to resist in their own spheres of influence the totalitarian menace to individual and national freedom.

A Kindred Viewpoint

What the future holds none can predict. The world has seen vast changes in the last 28 years. The Russian Tsardom became a Communist republic barely three years after the outbreak of the war. The ancient Sultanate of Turkey gave place to a modern republic. Italy has been conquered by Fascism, Germany by National Socialism. China has been overrun.

It may be that the democratic world will have to face far-reaching changes in its organization and mutual relations if the prosperity and liberty of its members are to survive. But if the United States and Great Britain decide once more to co-operate in the defense of democracy and in bringing peace and order to a broken world, it will not be because of community in race or blood or language, but because, as Edward Grey once wrote to Theodore Roosevelt before the war, "some generations of freedom on both sides have evolved a type of man and mind that looks at things from a kindred point of view, and a majority that has a hatred for what is not just and free."

Elementary, Mr. Ickes!

By Mark Sullivan

Honest Harold's Motive

WELL, the third-term movement is under way.

Pause, reader, right there. You read that phrase, "movement is under way." You read those words, about this movement and about many others, of many kinds. That phrase is one of those conveniences which newspaper writers, and others, frequently use, such as "it is stated," or "the general opinion is," or "a situation has developed."

Usually those statements are correct and are as complete as can be achieved. Often a movement does arise without being recognized until it is under way—by which time it is difficult to find just where and how it arose, and who started it, and why.

But the perspicacious reader will always bear in mind that, actually, movements do not often "arise." In the field of politics, or anywhere in the world of mass thought, rarely is there any such thing as what, in the physical world, is called spontaneous combustion. Rarely does a movement "arise." Practically always, movements are "started." Always, back of the movement, is a man, or group of men. Often this man discreetly shields himself within a cloak of anonymity.

The Usual Motive Is Self-Interest

ALWAYS there was a man—call him Mr. A.—who took a certain step, did a certain thing, from which the rest followed. Sometimes Mr. A acts alone—something occurs to him, he acts upon it, and it turns out that his happy thought was so apt to the condition that presently a movement is under way. Sometimes "A" consults with "B." Both call in "C." They consider how to start a movement, and they take the appropriate steps. But always there is the Mr. A. The reader—everybody at all times—will be helped in his thinking if he never lets himself forget that individualism is the rule, not only in economics but in all things. Always there is a Mr. A. Usually Mr. A has a motive. And usually the motive is self-interest, of one sort or another. Self-interest is almost as general a rule as individualism.

Always, for every so-called movement, and anything else, there was a man who started it, a reason why he started it, a time and place where it began. To find the time and the place and the man is the function of reporters. Frequently they live up to the function. Sometimes, in the hurry of the day's events, they cannot. Then it is up to the more leisurely historian to identify the where and when and how and why and who—though frequently, by the time the historian gets around to the task, the beginnings of a movement are too lost in legend to make identification possible.

Well, about this third-term movement. Can we find the Mr. A in that?

Honest Harold 'Starts' The Move

WE HAVE, as the lawyers say, one overt act. A member of President Roosevelt's Cabinet, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, writes in the periodical Look a call for a third term for Mr. Roosevelt. Was the writing of that article—it must have been written some weeks ago—the first step? Did Mr. Ickes write it of his own accord? Is he the Mr. A or is he B or C?

Quite possibly Mr. Ickes did it on his own—he has the directness and naive simplicity implied by the term "Honest Harold." The motive of self-interest is there—lots of it. For unless Mr. Roosevelt stays in the White House, Honest Harold does not stay in Washington. And he likes it here, he'd hate to go back to Chicago and obscurity. Indeed, it is doubtful if he ever would go back to Chicago. He has bought a place near Washington, a farm in the lovely Maryland countryside. Unless Mr. Roosevelt stays in the White House, Mr. Ickes must look forward to private life on the outer fringe of Washington—a kind of life that would make permanent his already nearly chronic state of grouch. He would arise each morning, pick up The Washington Post, read what is being done by another President, and reflect how much better it would be done by Mr. Roosevelt. Worse yet, he would read what is being done by another Secretary of the Interior; he would throw the paper to the ground, stomp on it, and bitterly wail to the circumambient Maryland air: "That fellow slept in my bed again last night."

YES, Honest Harold facing private life and permanent disapproval of things as they would be, has reason enough to wish a third term for Mr. Roosevelt. He may have written that magazine article of his own initiative. Yet I here present a tip to the future historian. Search carefully to find if, before Mr. Ickes wrote that article, there was consultation between him and Mr. Charles Michelson and young Mr. Corcoran and the other White House janizaries who, like Mr. Ickes, face the grim bleakness of private life unless they can keep Mr. Roosevelt in the Presidency. The historian need not search for consultation between Mr. Ickes and Mr. Roosevelt—I doubt whether that took place; Mr. Ickes could safely assume that Mr. Roosevelt would be pleased. But, merely for the sake of historical detail, one would like to know whether Harold consulted with the circle of White House intimates. If Harold says he didn't, that settles it—Harold is honest. If only he had wisdom and prudence in proportion to his honesty!

Slow Motion

By Barnet Nover

Europe's Blocs Mark Time

IN COMPARISON with the feverish pace that characterized the activities of Europe's statesmen a little while ago, current diplomatic activity in the Old World resembles an exercise in slow motion.

Both the Anglo-French and the German-Italian camps remain fully on guard, alert to every opportunity to strengthen their side in anticipation of the inevitable day of reckoning. And no nation is under any illusion that the present lull is more than an uneasy breathing spell between crises.

THE FACT IS that the area of diplomatic maneuver is now quite limited, which explains why there have been so few spectacular developments during these last weeks. The number of so-called neutrals, that is of nations holding aloof from either of the two great blocs that have arisen in Europe, has been drastically cut down since March 15.

That date saw the extinction of Czecho-Slovak independence which was soon after followed by the absorption of Albania in the Italian empire. At that time the pendulum of power appeared to be swinging irresistibly in the direction of the axis. Since then, however, it has been swinging the other way.

Fearful that Germany's ultimate objective was the destruction of British power, the Chamberlain government undertook an active search for allies. Negotiations were begun with Soviet Russia, an alliance was made with Poland; guarantees of support were extended to Greece and Rumania; Turkey was won over. Europe's balance of power, so rudely shattered by successive German and Italian aggressions, was thus, in part at least restored.

IT IS AN UNEASY balance. Neither side is or can be certain that given its present strength it can effectively challenge the other. Each side, therefore, is anxious to add to the number of its allies or, at least, to prevent the rival bloc from becoming any stronger.

Berlin-Rome's activities in this particular have been significant. On May 22, the axis was transformed into an alliance. This week Germany concluded nonaggression pacts with Latvia and Esthonia supplementing a similar arrangement recently made with Denmark and foreshadowing, so Berlin hopes, a pact with Yugoslavia.

With Hungary to all intents and purposes already an ally of the axis, the Berlin-Rome camp can now count on the support or at least the neutrality of an important group of strategically placed nations. And there is also Spain which, ostensibly, has not yet committed herself. But the vehement emphasis increasingly placed by Hitler and Mussolini on German and Italian contributions to Franco suggests that they have no intention of permitting Spain to escape the net they have spread for her.

ON THE OTHER side, the sum total of military, naval, economic and financial power is fully as impressive as that which the axis can muster. But whereas the axis powers constitute a geographically solid block, the nations adhering to the peace front are scattered. The result is that certain countries, the Baltic republics being a case in point, are under pressure to barter their freedom of action for a promise of nonaggression.

For this they can hardly be blamed. Esthonia, Latvia and Denmark, for instance, cannot be sure that Hitler will live up to his pledge to respect their independence any more than he has lived up to other solemn commitments. But they have had to reckon with the possibility that if they turn down the olive branch extended from Berlin the result might be a thrust from the bayonet on which this olive branch was pinned.

They chose the olive branch. Having done that, however, they are in no position to ask for a guarantee of protection from Great Britain or France or Russia. They know what happened to the German-Polish treaty when Poland made her alliance with Great Britain. And Great Britain for her part is reluctant to thrust a guarantee down the throats of the unwilling Esthonians or Latvians.

IT IS APPARENT, then, that Germany has not wholly been marking time during this breathing spell. The nonaggression treaties with the two tiny Baltic republics constitute a barrier to the conclusion of the Anglo-Russian pact. Without that pact the "peace bloc" which the London and Paris governments have been seeking to build up may collapse.

Because the great powers have taken sides, the role of the little nations has become tremendously important.

It remains to be seen how the obstacle of Esthonian and Latvian, not to mention Finnish, unwillingness to accept a Russian or even an Anglo-French-Russian guarantee of their sovereignty and independence will be overcome. It is clear, however, that Great Britain is determined to overcome that obstacle. That is why a special envoy is being sent to Moscow to discuss the points at issue between the British and Russian governments on the question of the proposed alliance.

As Winston Churchill has pointed out, it is as much to Russia's advantage as it is to the advantage of Great Britain and France to have such an alliance concluded. But pending further negotiations between Moscow and London the axis powers are doing everything possible to prevent it or at least to offset it.

Senate to Vote On USHA Credit

Agreement was reached by the Senate late yesterday to vote at 3 p. m. today on the Administration bill to increase the borrowing power of the United States Housing Authority from $800,000,000 to $1,600,000,000.

Though passage of the measure was believed certain, a test of opinion on the Government's slum-clearance and new housing program will come on an amendment by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, to increase the borrowing power to $1,200,000,000, or $400,000,000 less than is provided in the bill.

D. C. Supply Bill Goes to Conference

Collins May Resist Senate Increases; Nichols Forecasts Approval of Revisions

The 1940 District supply bill was sent to conference by the House yesterday as Chairman Collins, of the House subcommittee, indicated he will resist the Senate increases and the hike of $2,750,000 in the United States lump sum payment.

At the same time, House District Committee approval of the revised local revenue measure was forecast by Chairman Nichols, of the fiscal affairs subcommittee, when the bill is considered in executive session today.

To Fight for Lower Base

While members of the committee have indicated they will fight for a lower base on the income tax provisions of the measure as a substitute for the remodeled business privilege tax, the amendments are expected to be reserved until the bill reaches the House floor.

Unless the bill is acted on today, Nichols pointed out, it will have to lie over for the second District day on the fourth Monday of June.

The bill which he will present to the committee contains all of the original tax proposals of the Pond report, as indorsed by the Citizens Advisory Committee, except the sales tax, which the House District Committee has already rejected. The substitution of the revised gross receipts tax, Nichols said, is the only substantial change in the original tax program.

Only Other Change

The only other material change made by the sub-committee was to lower the income tax base from $14,000 to $10,000 on earned income.

Collins said that conferences on the District supply bill will be started within the next few days.

Practically all of the Senate increases in the appropriations hinge on the maintenance of the larger lump sum. It is expected that these appropriations, chiefly for new schools and additional relief, will be reduced in proportion to the cut in the lump sum payment if the House conferees are adamant.

150 Middies Sail Despite Gala Day

Fleet schedules are fleet schedules, even though the King and Queen are coming to town.

About 150 midshipmen of the Naval Academy second class, here since Tuesday night, sailed this morning for Newport, R. I., and couldn't join 600,000 Washingtonians in a scramble to see the British sovereigns today and tomorrow. They are on a practice cruise, and after spending the day at the Washington Navy Yard, learning how the big guns are made, were off early this morning on the six destroyers of the training squadron.

Another group of the midshipmen will visit Washington next month and a third contingent in August.

Names to Go On Outside Of Schools

Board Decides to Make Identification From Exterior Easy

Washington's "nameless" schools will be identified for the public, according to action of the Board of Education yesterday.

A report of the board's committee on buildings, grounds and equipment cited 15 schools lacking any exterior identification. In the list were the McKinley, Woodrow Wilson, Armstrong and Cardozo High Schools, the Bancroft, Lafayette, Langdon, Murch, Bowen, Bundy, Burrville, Langston, Logan, Walker, and M. M. Washington schools.

The board voted that action be taken to see that the schools are properly marked.

The board approved retirement of Miss Ida P. Hammond, of McKinley; Mrs. E. P. Smith and Miss A. A. Jones, of Roosevelt High; Mrs. R. D. Howard, of Douglass-Simmons; Mrs. C. C. Renfro, of Armstrong High, and Joseph Fadley, engineer at Randall Junior High.

Age requirements for admission to the District's vocational schools were raised to 15 years, with a proviso that younger students may be admitted in special cases.

The board accepted gifts of seven scholarships for students in divisions 1 to 9 for study at the National Art School, and two medals from Miss Rosalie Wells, to be awarded senior high school students for essays in French art, literature, or history.

Award of prizes to the following students was announced:

A $200 scholarship to Theresa Berry, of Dunbar High School; "Betty" lamps awarded by the Home Economics Association to Catherine Ritchie, of Anacostia High; Virginia Gray, of Central; Clarice Helen Wright, of Eastern; Ruth B. Billington, of McKinley, and Margaret Giessner, of Woodrow Wilson.

Book prizes to Ida Mildred Eades, of Anacostia; Elizabeth Pitzer, of Central; Mary E. Lipske, of Eastern; Edna Mae Gilbert, of McKinley; Louise Thompson, Woodrow Wilson, and Bessie Hebron, of Armstrong.

Miss Rolph Gets Prize for Essay On Merit System

Miss Marie-Louise Rolph, of Roosevelt High School, last night was presented first prize in the District Federation of Federal Employes' essay contest on "The Merit System vs. the Spoils System," by Harry B. Mitchell, of the Civil Service Commission, in exercises at departmental Auditorium.

Mitchell praised the interest exhibited by high school students in the advancement of the merit system before presenting other awards, as follows: Second prize, Josephine Closs, of Holy Cross Academy; honorable mention, Margaret Mary Smith, Georgetown Visitation Convent; Anna Mae O'Brien, Holy Trinity High School; Margaret Mary Johnson, Georgetown Visitation Convent; Mary Sheila Corbett, Sacred Heart Academy, and Frances Kennard, Roosevelt High School.

New Masonic Temple Rites Set Today

Cornerstone to Be Dedicated For Building on Sixteenth Street

This story was written partly in order to be enclosed in a five-ton stone, 8 feet long and 4½ feet high, that will contain besides other items of Masonic, civic, or historic interest, a copy of this morning's Washington Post. The stone is to be the cornerstone of the new Scottish Rite Temple on Sixteenth street near Harvard, which will be sealed and dedicated with Masonic ceremonies at 2 p. m. today.

The building is expected to be completed in January, 1940, and in many respects will be one of the most noteworthy buildings in Washington. The principal address at this afternoon's ceremonies will be delivered by John H. Cowles, sovereign grand commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry for the southern jurisdiction of the United States.

Charles Cyrus Coombs, deputy of the Supreme Council Valley of Washington, will preside. Others who will participate are Frank Stetson, chairman of the building committee; Hector G. Spaulding, chairman, cornerstone committee; John C. Palmer, grand chaplain; Marx E. Kahn, and Simpson B. Daugherty.

Masters of the co-ordinate bodies, members of the building committee, and board of trustees will be presented. They include Ralph H. Gauker, Carl Collier, John C. Palmer, J. Walter Karsner, Arthur B. Hayes, Monie Sanger, officers of co-ordinate bodies; Frank Stetson, Sulliman Daoud, Robert P. Smith, Nathan Weill and Charles Cyrus Coombs, board of trustees; Frank Stetson, Monie Sanger, Robert P. Smith, Charles Cyrus Coombs, and Austin J. Leister, building committee.

The temple will be the home of Mithras Lodge of Perfection; Evangelist Chapter, Knights Rose Croix; Robert de Bruce Council, Knights Kadosh, and Albert Pike Consistory, M. R. S., which bodies constitute the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry.

Woman Convicted Of Manslaughter Of Son-in-Law

A Circuit Court jury at Upper Marlboro, Md., early today found Mrs. Mallie V. Vincent, 45-year-old Seat Pleasant club woman guilty of manslaughter in the killing of her son-in-law, Michael Mattia, 35, after a 3 hour and 25 minutes deliberation.

Mrs. Vincent, who was unmoved at the verdict, had pleaded that she shot and killed Mattia in self-defense in an argument over an electric light bill.

All Faiths Here Bid Canon Stokes Goodbye

Threaten to Picket, Saying Departure Is Unfair to Town

A tall, lanky man with a goatee retained his poise last night against such a deluge of tributes, compliments and eulogies as has never, in all probability been surpassed in the Capital.

He was Canon Anson Phelps Stokes of Washington Cathedral who, with his wife, was receiving a testimonial farewell by the community he has served for the last 15 years. After a decade and a half of religious, interracial and social welfare work in the District, Canon Stokes will leave for New England late in June to devote himself to writing.

Last night's testimonial dinner, sponsored by the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, which was founded by Dr. Stokes, was held in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. It was distinguished not only by tributes of Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, Bishop James E. Freeman, Senator William H. King and numerous others but the registering of a grievance against the guest of honor.

Name Mispronounced

The Rev. Dr. William S. Abernathy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, plaintively protested that Dr. Stokes, though their friendship is many years old, still calls him "Dr. Abercrombie."

True enough, when the retiring clergyman arose later in the evening to respond he unintentionally said "Dr. Abercrombie" in the course of a reference to the Baptist pastor.

The packed Barker Hall, filled to overflowing with more than 200 friends of Dr. and Mrs. Stokes, roared with laughter.

Justice Stone said the honored couple were the personification of tolerance, adding that "tolerance in race, religion, social and political life is fundamental in civilized society."

"When we lose it," he said, "we lose something of great importance to civilized society. Some of the world already has lost it and we cannot be sure, sometimes, that we are not in danger of losing it ourselves."

Bishop Freeman pointed out that Dr. Stokes came very near taking a post with "a very important boys' school" instead of coming to Washington Cathedral, as he eventually decided to do, in 1924.

"Mrs. Stokes and I had to engage in a little conspiracy to help make him choose Washington," the bishop asserted with a smile.

The tall, lanky man with a goatee was depicted by Bishop Freeman as an ambassador of goodwill who is "a fine example of the ministry and who enjoys the affection of all his colleagues on the hill."

King Deplores Departure

Senator King described Canon Stokes' passing from the Washington scene as a deep blow to the community.

Coleman Jennings, president, and Herbert Willett, director, praised him in behalf of the Community Chest. William H. Savin, executive secretary, lauded his achievements for the Family Service Association.

The Rev. Dr. E. H. Pruden, president, spoke for the Washington Federaiton of Churches, on whose board Dr. Stokes served for several years. The Rev. Maurice Sheehy, head of the department of religion at Catholic University, suggested the possibility of the gathering's adjourning to the home of Dr. and Mrs. Stokes and forming a picket line to protest that their departure was unfair.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, praised Dr. Stokes' work for the Negro race and Dean Benjamin Mays read a resolution of appreciation.

John Ihlder, executive head of the Alley Dwelling Authority, and former Judge James Cobb reviewed Dr. Stokes' pioneering efforts in behalf of slum clearance and low-cost housing for the underprivileged.

Rabbi Presents Volumes

Mrs. William Floyd Crosby, Girl Scout commissioner, paid special tribute to Mrs. Stokes, who has long been active in Girl Scout work. Dr. Leverett S. Lyon described the clergyman's contributions to the Brookings Institution, of whose board he is a member.

In behalf of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld presented to Canon Stokes a 10-volume edition of the Midrash, post-Biblical commentaries.

The couple also received a hand-tooled leather chest containing the resolutions adopted by more than a score civic and religious organizations and other tributes in writing.

The Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant First Presbyterian Church and chairman of the Committee on Religious Life, presided at the dinner.

Entertainment was by two Howard University students, Horace T. Wilson, vocalist, accompanied by Robert Earle Anderson.

First Lady Speaks at Work Parley

Delegates Press For Minimum Pay Of $2,000 and Old-Age Security

Delegates to the "National Right-to-Work Congress" continued yesterday to press their claims for adequate work relief, old age security, and a minimum income of $2,000 a year, by means of speeches, songs, resolutions, interviews with legislators, and a "See How It Feels" relief dinner. The last was held last night in the National Press Club Auditorium, and consisted of stew, prunes, a slice of bread and coffee.

In the afternoon Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt addressed the members of the congress assembled under the auspices of the Workers' Alliance of America, in the auditorium of the Labor Department. At the dinner Senator James E. Murray (Democrat), of Montana, and a number of Representatives added their voices to those of the delegates. Performers from the New York Theater Arts committee whipped an audience of 400 into riotous enthusiasm with working class songs.

Value of the national arts and work projects under WPA was indorsed by speakers who included Sophia Townsend Warner, of London, author of "Mr. Fortune's Maggot," and Representative Kent E. Keller (Democrat), of Illinois.

Former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, representing the Little Business Men's League of America, with a membership of 67,000 was on the afternoon program with Mrs. Roosevelt. He told the delegates little business is behind the WPA program because "it has saved the little business man." The league, he said, will be with the Workers' Alliance in its fight for the Murray-Casey bill to expand WPA appropriations and save the jobs of 1,000,000 WPA workers.

Following a prepared address in which she emphasized the needs and opportunities of youth, Mrs. Roosevelt said that she was not familiar with the debates in the congress, but that she felt "quite certain that there are probably some things that you believe in that I don't believe in.

"But I do believe," she added, "in people getting together to discuss their problems and to try to have their point of view presented to responsible people."

Milo Perkins, president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, told the delegates at the dinner that his corporation would continue "to try to make it possible for unemployed people to eat the surplus" farm products. Gardner Jackson, vice president of Labor's Nonpartisan League, presided.

Autoist Saves Child

A District youth escaped serious injury to himself last night when he deliberately swerved his car head-on into a street car to avoid striking a 12-year-old child in the 600 block of H street northeast.

Morris Goldberg, 20, was treated for shock after he crashed his auto into the trolley. Police said Lawrence Condatorre, 12, 705 Fifth street northeast, had darted from between two parked cars into its path.

Paul Muni Has Earned His Screen Distinction

Star of 'Juarez' Has Unique Background; Royalty Will Deplete Box-Offices Today; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

SINCE PAUL MUNI is coming to the screen at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater tomorrow in the title role of "Juarez," it might not be amiss to bend an eye upon the past record of this sterling actor and recapitulate, once again, the theatrical background upon which he has fed that he is grown so great.

BELL

Born Muni Weisenfreund, in Lemberg, Austria, on September 22, 1897, of professional parents, Muni has spent his life in the theater. While still only a child, believe it or not, he was playing elderly character parts on the stage—old men with long beards and all that sort of thing, when he himself was of velocipede age. Once in America, he became a member of the Yiddish Art Theater and played a variety of roles that would stagger a modern "type" actor. He played with the Yiddish Art Theater for four years and then with other Yiddish groups until 1926, when he made his first appearance in an American play, bearing the title of "We Americans." Perhaps the most notable of the native plays in which he appeared following this initial excursion into American drama was "Counsellor at Law," one of the better melodramatic items of its year.

The Muni screen career began in 1928 under the Fox aegis. His first exploits in the cinema were not too successful, though no fault of his own. "The Valiant," the old Bert Lytell standby on the stage—I think he owns the play—was not so bad on the screen as Muni did it, but "The Man With Seven Faces," which came a little later, was not so good, either. It was when he paid a brief visit to Washington at the time of the premiere of "Seven Faces," at the Fox Theater—now Loew's Capitol—that I first met him.. He struck me as being an exceedingly earnest young man with explicit notions of what he thought screen acting ought to be like and a pretty fixed conviction of the sort of plays in which he would like to appear. Nothing was said at that time about biographical drama.

It is in biographical drama on the silver sheet, however, that Muni has attained his greatest heights—including an Academy award for the best acting of the year. It was "The Story of Louis Pasteur" that brought him this honor. That was followed by an equally impressive depiction of "The Life of Emile Zola." Interlarded with these was the memorable "The Good Earth," in which he played the role of the young farmer, Wang Lung, and Luise Rainer appeared as O-Lan.

A Puzzling Award

It has always been incomprehensible to this column why Miss Rainer was accorded a second Academy award for her work in this picture and Mr. Muni was not. He carried the brunt of the whole thing in a role of expansive proportions and did it admirably. Miss Rainer's chief duty was to look infinitely pathetic and read a total of 72 lines during the action of a play that consumed something in excess of two hours. But that is all water under the bridge, as the saying goes.

The major consideration at the moment seems to be that Paul Muni, in association with Bette Davis, Brian Aherne and a cast of unusual length and distinction, is about to appear in another of his splendid rehabilitations of a figure of the past. His Benito Juarez is not quite like anything he has done before. He portrays the role with a stoical and terse brevity of speech that is completely in the character of the Indian patriot whom he impersonates.

You will be strengthened in your belief, when you see this picture, that Muni is one of the screen's most compelling actors. You may not like the part and some of the things it makes the actor do, but you will admire the actor all the more on that account.

There are still rumors floating about that the Olney Theater will open within the next week or two with Glenda Farrell in "Stage Door." Whether Marsha Hunt will be in the cast—as seemed to have been arranged before Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran left that "Union Pacific Special" a few weeks back—I wouldn't know. In fact, I wouldn't know anything definite about any of this. But I have hopes.

In case the midweek notices, appearing on the next page—I hope—are not read with the avidity and care which they deserve, it should be pointed out that the ensuing week in the palaces of the cinema holds out little in the way of new entertainment. The current pictures are so good that most of them are being held over and some that already have had their first runs proved so worthy that they are being brought back.

"Juarez," at the Earle, concerning which something already has been said, and "Lucky Night," at Loew's Capitol, are the only new exhibits held forth to attract the eye of the habitual "first nighter." You already know about "Juarez." "Lucky Night" has as its costars Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor, which ought to be recommendation enough. As for the rest—well, just glance across and read the midweeks.

I seem to have been wrong in a recent prediction that the World's Fair in New York would bring high prosperity to all of the surviving plays and musicals on Broadway. It is doing nothing of the sort, according to all report. Not an extra dime has accrued to any Broadway box office as a result of the influx of visitors to the fair. In the light of my own past experience, this is by way of being a bit of a phenomenon. Certainly the same condition did not exist during the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago, the St. Louis Fair or the San Francisco Exposition of 1915—or whenever it was. And the 15 extant plays on Broadway are all pretty good, too. What goes on here?

One suspects that the local theaters, while we are on the subject of box office, may not expect too much today. The "big show" will be elsewhere and huge crowds, according to every expectation, will be attending it.

It is not often that a King and Queen of the world's greatest empire pay a visit to the National Capital. When they do, it is hardly to be expected that the populace will pack the theaters in lieu of catching a glimpse of reigning royalty. It would be nice if the King and Queen could attend all of the theaters in town while they are here—yes, it would be nice!

Which reminds me that that incorrigible punster, Art Reilly, a former associate on this journal, called up to remark that since King George VI and Queen Elizabeth are the reigning monarchs of the British Empire, the least we can expect—in observance of the eternal unities—is that it will be raining today. And they shot Lincoln!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 7.

THOMAS MANN and Eduard Benes appeared at the League of American Writers meeting Friday night and were scheduled to address the guests . . . All the speeches were to be broadcast, and so a note was delivered to one of the radio officials advising "Mann and Benes must go on before 10" . . . Mann and Benes? Sounds like a vaudeville team," the official whispered to Donald Ogden Stewart. "What are they going to do?" . . . "Well, their routine is," Stewart replied, "Mann says to Benes: 'Who was that lady I saw you with last night?' and the other guy takes it up from there."

HARRY HOPKINS in Indiana last week told a dinner group: "The President will not be a passive spectator while other persons seek to gain control of the Democratic Party. Roosevelt won't duck that fight" . . . Peter Arno, the cartoonist, is entering a new field. He's designing automobiles in Long Island City . . . The Minskys of Burlesque, who were ordered not to use their name in any entertainment ventures, will fight that ruling—now that the World's Fair nudes are outstripping any of the old Minsky shows. The family now desires to present a Minsky Music Hall at Broadway and Forty-third street . . . Jacqueline Cochrane, the aviatrix, will try to break the transcontinental record with a New York-to-Hollywood flight this month.

MRS. EDDIE NEIL, widow of the newspaper man who was killed in Spain, just returned from Madrid, where she witnessed Franco's triumphant entry into that city. Mrs. Neil reported this sidelight: Marshal Petain, France's new Ambassador to Spain, was in the reviewing stand and helped preserve the fiction of nonintervention by the Fascist powers . . . Petain timed his arrival so that he took his place after the Italian troops had paraded, and timed his departure so that he left just before the German troops brought up the rear.

MILLICENT ROGERS will return to America next month. She probably will bring her son, Peter, back with her, although his father, Count Salm, is entitled to his custody during the summer months. She'll claim this right by asserting that Europe is unsafe for any civilian now . . . Alexander Woollcott will return to the air waves shortly by doing three broadcasts for Texaco . . . Mrs. George S. Kaufman and Charles Freedman have organized a producing firm and are looking for good manuscripts . . . Feje's Monte Carlo, New York's most elegant cafe, will be redecorated in chintz next week and will eliminate its fromal-attire rule for the customers.

LILLIAN HELLMAN, author of "The Little Foxes," spoke about playwrighting at the New School for Social Research. She addressed a class in play-craftsmanship and invited her listeners to criticize her play . . . "The one thing wrong with your play is the ending," Arthur Kober suggested. "The last words—'I'm not going to stand by and do nothing'—should have been spoken by a person of strong character. That's where you missed making it a marvelous play, a marvelous play," said Kober—and then, remembering that Miss Hellman is his former wife and that he is one of the play's backers—he added, "instead of just wonderful."

"THE HOT MIKADO," scheduled to be moved to the World's Fair, already has run into trouble. Equity still claims jurisdiction, which would mean a limit of only eight performances a week. The producers insist that the tabloid version they'll present, three times a day, brings the show under the jurisdiction of the American Federation of Actors . . . Lindy's Restaurant, incensed at the fair's competition, has withdrawn its "Welcome to the World's Fair" banner . . . Tess Gardella, who, as the plump "Aunt Jemima," has been a vaudeville headliner for 20 years, has lost 48 pounds and vows to shed 52 pounds more . . . That "Anonymous" $500 contribution to the League of American Writers was made by Harry Warner, of the Warner Bros.

YESTERDAY I reported that Dixie Davis, who is supposed to be serving a jail sentence, was seen by reliable witnesses last Monday sitting in a car parked on 161st street between Walton and Gerard, while one of his colleagues was in a market nearby, purchasing sturgeon and other delicacies for him . . . There are two additional details: The car was an old Ford. And Davis had parked it in that section of the street marked: "For Official Use Only."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 7.—I don't know any girl in the movies who has more friends than Zasu Pitts. Now that she's been off the screen for several months, she's allowed to come back in a dramatic part in "Edith Cavell." No more dizzy dames for Zasu. She tried going dramatic some years ago when she did the mother in "All Quiet on the Western Front." Even members of the cast laughed, so they replaced her with Beryl Mercer. You may also recall that when Spencer Tracy first made his appearance in "San Francisco" as a priest, the audience laughed. But at the end of five minutes they were crying. Marie Dressler never would have gotten away from slapstick, except for "Anna Christie." So let's give Pitts a pit-a-pat!

HOPPER

When Beulah Bondi, who's playing an old maid schoolteacher, wore her wrist watch with the face inside, Director Dick Wallace retook the scene and turned the watch around. He said, "All old maid's faces are worn on the outside, Beulah." Wonder how he knows.

Our two-time Academy winner, Luise Rainer, opened her London stage play, "Behold the Bride!" as a benefit for the Women's Welfare Center. And at $25 a seat! Isn't that the play Irene Rich tried out in San Francisco and Olympe Bradna made as a movie—"French Without Tears?"

A table for two at House of Murphy is called "Yuma Special." Several romances which ended at the altar started there. Alice Faye and Tony among others. There's a nightly rush for it!

And incidentally, Tony Martin, who left here three months ago for a two weeks' p. a. tour, will be back to wind up the last two Good News Shows for Metro. Tony's proof of the fact that if you've got what the public wants, they'll pay cash on the line. They did.

I love Tallulah Bankhead's kid story. A little boy, without his mother, was playing choo-choo with a couple of hymn books in church. When the minister intoned, "And the Lord said . . ."

"Toot toot," shrieked the little boy.

Try and say something disagreeable about Cary Grant to his stand-in, Mel Murrihugh. Mel's 4-year-old son had measles, with complications, and the whole family quarantined. Rather than allow another boy to do the job, Cary did his own standing-in. And the pay check went out as usual.

Dave Selznick wired to Georgia for watermelons. Reply was, "No melons until July." But he found plenty in Imperial Valley. I wonder how soon he'll cut his own melon, after "Gone' is released?

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 7.—Enid Bennett is returning to the movies, after an absence of eight years. She retired and went to Lakeport, near San Francisco, to live with her husband, Fred Niblo, once a top director and her children and would probably still be there, if David Selznick hadn't picked up an old fan magazine. He saw a picture of Enid and realized she was just the type for "Intermezzo," so he had an agent contact her, with the result she reaches Hollywood tomorrow morning.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I was interested in hearing about Enid, for I wrote the first interview with her when she was brought to this country from Australia by Tom Ince—a beautiful young blonde, completely bewildered by the hustle and bustle of America. David, I am told, gets a break in "Intermezzo" with Gregory Ratoff, who is ahead of schedule, and that's something with three stars, Leslie Howard Edna Best and Ingrid Bergman. Leslie, by the way, is actually taking violin lessons to perfect his Heifitz-like role.

All of us are very glad that Sally Eilers is coming back from New York to do a movie and postponing that summer stock idea until August. We missed her. She has been paged by RKO for the feminine lead in "Full Confession" with Victor McLaglen and Joseph Calleia. Harry Joe Brown and Poochie were out at the ranch Sunday and he told me then that Sally would return the twenty-first for a role that would give her a definite dramatic opportunity. Apparently, Sally told him she liked the story, which is that of an innocent man saved from the gallows after a priest persuades the real criminal to confess. McLaglen plays the criminal and Calleia the priest. John Farrow, who did such a swell job with "Five Came Back," will direct, with Bob Sisk producing.

If George Brent has his way, he will have a vacation when he finishes "The Rains Came." Bette Davis gets a three-months' holiday when "Elizabeth and Essex" is completed, which may have something to do with his plans. Also, there is a chance that Brentie will have to go into the hospital for an operation. Meanwhile, Paramount is doing its best to lure him there for "Madame Mystery," the second Isa Miranda picture. Something has to be done with Miranda who, after two years, hasn't turned out to be as good an investment as everyone hoped. Maybe, if she gets a good picture, she will be as colorful a figure in the U. S. A. as she was in Italy.

The Hollywood Britishers' salute to the King and Queen this Sunday gets more illustrious with each new name added to the list. While Their Majesties catch their breath in a day of rest at President Roosevelt's Hyde Park home, Leslie Howard, Vivien Leigh, Madeleine Carroll, Basil Rathbone, Herbert Marshall, Freddy Bartholomew, Errol Flynn, Ronald Colman, Greer Garson and a dozen others, including Norma Shearer and Charlie Chaplin, are scheduled to broadcast their greetings. It was almost a shock to find Norma's name in the list, until I remembered she is really a Canadian girl. Norma's been here so long she's more like a native daughter.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Randy Scott's chief romantic interest this last week has been Eleanor Thompson, Chicago heiress. Her pa owns the famous Thompson restaurants; Mrs. Edward Arnold has been seriously ill with a sore throat for the past three weeks; Dick Greene was so much better today that the whole ICF studio was rejoicing; Billy Haines is feteing Aileen Pringle at a cocktail party tomorrow. She leaves for New York Friday and her friends are expecting an announcement of her marriage to Nicholas Murray, the photographer, within the month; Movita is talking business to a London movie concern, so she can be with her bridegroom, Jack Doyle; Mary Carlisle and Dick Cromwell, one of the steadiest and nicest twosomes among the younger set.

Bebe Daniels sings "The Honorable Mr. So and So." Sam Coslow's popular tune, Saturday at 11 o'clock over a transatlantic hookup; Joe E. Brown's 8-year-old Mary will ride in the Northridge Horse Show and pa will be with her. I bet they steal the show; Lili Damita is hostessing a luncheon for 14 girls on Errol Flynn's boat. He says it's more girls than he ever collected there at one time; Richard Barthelmess, convalescing from sinus and looking fit again, lunching at Levy's.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

For Fire Only

Cecil B. De Mille has had old-time glass ball fire extinguishers installed in all the railroad cars he is using in "Union Pacific." He remembers them well because when he was a touring actor aboard a train wrecked near Wheeling, W. Va., one of them fell and struck him on the head, knocking him unconscious.

'Juarez' and 'Lucky Night' Top Film Week

Many Holdovers Billed; Roadside Opens Soon; Open-Air Events

"JAUREZ." Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne and John Garfield portray the leading roles in this historical film of a simple Mexican's triumph over the power of foreign dictatorship. Muni is Benito Juarez, the Mexican patriot who liberated his country from the French empire, and Aherne and Miss Davis are Emperor Maximillian and his Empress Carlotta, placed in Mexico by Napoleon III, and Eugenie. Claude Rains, Donald Crisp, Joseph Calleia, Gale Sondergaard, Gilbert Roland, Montagu Love and John Miljan also are in the cast of the widely heralded film. On the stage the revue, "Summer Souvenirs," features Earline King, songstress; Glen Pope, aristocrat of magic; the 16 Earle Roxyettes and the six Virginians. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"LUCKY NIGHT." Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor co-star in this light, over-night romance, that stems from a park bench acquaintanceship of two cheerful unemployed. How they panhandle 50 cents and turn it into thousands forms the fun which leads up to the unmasking of Miss Loy as a steel magnate's daughter. Joseph Allen, Henry O'Neill and Bernadene Hayes are in the company. Arthur Treacher, the screen's familiar butler, recently seen as Shirley Temple's dancing partner in "The Little Princess," headlines the stage bill, assisted by Jack Norton. Al Stone and Tish Lee and Jack La Vier and Ruthie Morgan, both American acts which have played command performances in London, are co-featured with the Dorn Brothers and Mary; Enters and Borgia; Evelyn Tyner and the 20 Rhythm Rockets. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE." Another holdover is this musical film of the prohibition era, with Alice Faye, Tyrone Power and Al Jolson as its starring trio. It is a theatrical story, with Jolson portraying a role very similar to that of his own life, introducing again some of the songs he made famous. Miss Faye is a "Follies" chanteuse, who loves the wrong man, a pleasant, but weak-willed fellow played by Power. William Frawley, Joyce Compton and Hobart Cavanaugh are featured.

Metropolitan

"CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY." The picture inspired by the revelations of Nazi spy activities in this country, recently unearthed in espionage trails, returns to the downtown area, after a successful week at the Earle. Edward G. Robinson heads the cast, which includes Paul Lukas, Francis Lederer and Lya Lys. Leon G. Turrou, noted F. B. I. agent, acted as this fictional story's technical adviser. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"THE HARDYS RIDE HIGH." After two weeks at the Palace, the latest of the popular series returns to Lonely Street to reveal what occurs when the Judge's family apparently inherits $2,000,000. Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Sara Haden, Virginia Grey and Minor Watson are in the company. Opens tomorrow.

Trans-Lux

THE PANAMA CANAL is the setting for the travelogue at the newsreel theater, featuring a trip through the man-made wonder, now celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary. "Know Your History" describes the beginnings of the "open door" policy in China. "Water Fun" and "Small Fry" are the other shorts on the predominately news program. Opens tomorrow.

RKO-Keith's

"THE MIKADO." With Kenny Baker, the genial tenor, joining the members of London's D'Oyly Carte Opera Company in this film version of the fabulously successful Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, the musical continues for a second week on Fifteenth street. Filmed in Technicolor, the work is further enhanced by the accompaniment of the London Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Geoffrey Toye. Besides Baker, the company includes Martyn Green, Sydney Granville, John Barclay, Jean Colin and Constance Willis. "Donald's Cousin Gus," a Walt Disney cartoon, also is held over.

Mount Vernon

"LET US LIVE," co-starring Henry Fonda and Maureen O'Sullivan, occupies the large screen at the open-air, drive-in theater through Saturday evening. On Sunday through next Wednesday, Alice Faye sings in "You're a Sweetheart."

Glen Echo

THE SWIMMING POOL and sand beach are two of the leading attractions these sun-baked days at the amusement park. The Coaster Dips, World Cruise and Dodgem Rides continue to be popular and the Spanish Garden ballroom, Wally Stoefler and his "Soft Shoe orchestra play for dancing each evening through Saturday, June 7. Houston Davis, holder of the world's record for a drum roll (six hours and a half), is featured with the band.

S. S. Potomac

GENE KRUPA wears his crown as "King of Drummers" on both of the moonlight cruise of the S. S. Potomac this Saturday evening. The Potomac sails from its Seventh street wharf at 8:45 p. m. and 12:30 a. m., with Krupa leading his own band and Irene Daye as vocalist. The Potomac makes nightly cruises down the river, as well as Sunday afternoon trips to Quantico.

Wilson Line

TOMORROW MORNING, The City of Washington sails from its Seventh street wharf at 10 o'clock on a cruise to Mount Vernon, during the course of which it will pass the Presidential yacht, on which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are entertaining the visiting King George and Queen Elizabeth. The steamer also makes daily trips to Marshall Hall and moonlight cruises each evening.

Roadside

"THE PIONEER'S DAUGHTER" opens the sixth season at the barn theater on the Rockville Pike next Monday evening. Subtitled "The Perils of the Prairie," this "thriller," wherein the audience cheers the hero and hisses the villain, contains some players new to Roadside. Betty Gray will be back at the piano to accompany the action with suitable music and there will be extra-curricular singing between the acts.

Cross Roads

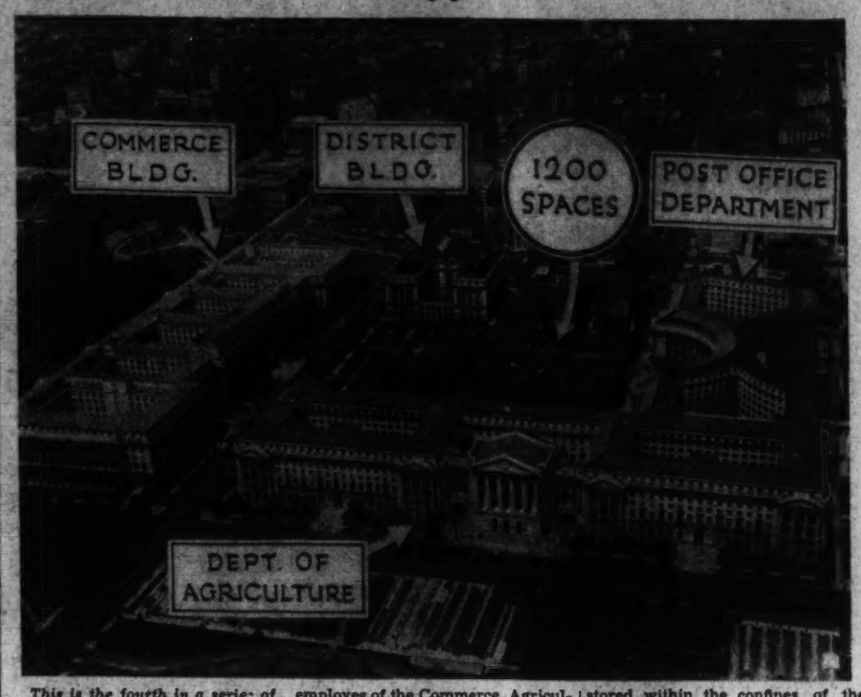
"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE," enters its second week in the red barn theater at Baileys Cross Roads in Virginia. The record-breaking Anne Nichols comedy is played by Don Sisler, Peggy Johnston, Charles Hohein, Ruth May, Edmund J. Evans, Lewis Brott, Bob Langley and Ted Field. Curtain goes up at 8:40 each evening, except Sunday.

Appeals Court Stays Bostic Electrocution

The Court of Appeals yesterday directed the District Court to delay the electrocution here of James Bostic, colored, for murdering William R. Tuckson, jr., colored, in 1936, until the higher court has heard an appeal from the denial of Bostic's application for a habeas corpus.

You Can't Park Here:

Elimination of District Bldg. Lot Worries Traffic Authorities



This is the fourth in a series of articles dealing with the parking problem in Washington.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Traffic authorities are frankly worried about what will happen to downtown parking conditions when the huge lot behind the District Building is eliminated to make way for a Federal park.

With a capacity of 1,200 cars, this lot has been a boon to parkers in the congested area and city heads get slightly jittery every time they think of its removal. The lot will remain for several years to come—but still, officials are wondering. They admit no concrete plans to care for the additional cars is yet in the offing.

Through facilities offered by the so-called "District Building lot," employes of the Commerce, Agriculture, Labor and Postoffice Departments have enjoyed a handy place to leave their cars. As early as 8 a. m., however, the "full" sign has been posted.

Planners are convinced that some system of parking the more than 1,000 cars which daily use this lot during working hours must be devised—but they aren't quite sure where to begin.

Some have suggested that facilities within the adjacent Government buildings must be provided—even at the expense of tearing out a few basement rooms. There is already space to provide off-street parking for 138 cars at the Commerce Department. The Labor Department, however, can accommodate only 38 vehicles, and only 40 can be stored within the confines of the Postoffice—and most of these are cars owned by officials.

John Nolan, jr., of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, contends the only solution to downtown parking difficulties is the construction of adequate off-street space in present and future Government and private buildings.

More and more Government workers who drive to their offices from outlying sections are using Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer's strongly advocated system of "fringe" parking. They drive just to the edge of the congested area and leave their cars and ride to work on buses or street cars.

Many employes of the Commerce Department and workers in the District's financial area leave their cars as far away as Anacostia.

Indian Rhinoceros Bound for Capital

A genuine Indian rhinoceros of a species rarely seen in this country is on the seas bound for Washington, Zoo officials revealed yesterday.

The beast is in the custody of Malcolm Davis, an assistant head keeper, who went to India for the sole purpose of bringing it back alive. Davis wrote that he is returning with several smaller animals also. Arrival in New York is scheduled for the first week in July.

Girls' School to Let Out 6 Teachers

Six members of the staff at the National Training School for Girls will be let out July 1 and the salaries of the remaining 20 members will be reclassified to bring them down to the legal minimum, it was announced yesterday.

Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, said the action was taken in order to comply with the restrictions on appropriations for the school for the fiscal year beginning July 1, imposed by Congress. An allotment of $20,800 has been approved for salaries.

Little

Those cataclysmic days so strangely like our own, at which we moderns occasionally sneer as "Victorian," returned to the screen of the Little Theater yesterday morning with the patly-timed revival of "Victoria the Great."

There is no denying the fact that when our Capital City is welcoming one of her descendants, a film glorifying Britain's great ruler has an added zing. Completely unabashed in its frank patriotism, it might well have been subtitled, "The English Way."

For the Victorian days were far more exhilarating than we 1939ers ever stop to consider them. Instead of airplanes, the conservatives fretted about the new fangled railroad trains; in place of the AAA and its attendant fracas, there was bickering over the corn laws; while we jeer at modern music, they were getting attuned to the melodies of Mendelssohn and if the Spanish Civil War tested our tempers, the Civil War in the United States was as heatedly fought out in England then.

Anna Neagle Stars

That Victoria sailed through all these tumultuous events for more than sixty years testifies to her fitness as a dramatic heroine. As was the case in Lawrence Houseman's "Victoria Regina," with the unforgettable Helen Hayes, the film emphasizes the human qualities of the Queen. Her reluctance to propose to her husband, her courage in the face of physical danger, her petty jealousy of a husband's attention to anyone but herself, her deeply felt responsibility for her most unfortunate people, all these are well known to the contemporary theater goer. Miles Malleson and Charles de Grandcourt wrote the well-documented scenario, not copying any of the scenes from Miss Hayes' vehicle, but producing much the same effect of warm grandeur.

Anna Neagle is remarkably effective as the Queen, particularly in moments which display physical fortitude. The scene after the attempt on her life on Constitution Hill is as effective as it is subdued. Anton Walbrook is a restrained and convincing Albert and H. B. Warner and Hugh Miller, respectively, portray Melbourne and Disraeli.

Technicolor—as it was two years ago, when the film was made—lends splendor to the final years of pageantry when the diamond jubilee procession stops in front of St. Paul's. Since a regal mood is in the air these days, you will get it authentically by dropping off at the Little, which leavens its bill with a taste of Walt Disney. R. L. C.

First Lady Visits Press Club Office

Women's New Quarters Opens; Tea Served for Associate Members

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Preparations at the White House for the coming of the royal guests today, did not interfere with the visit of Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday afternoon to the new headquarters of the Newspaper Women's Club at the Raleigh Hotel. The First Lady, an honorary member of the club, arrived shortly after 5 o'clock, remained for tea and, with Katharine Brooks, the new president, inspected the clubroom.

She wore a frock of boy blue, matched by the blue flowers forming the crown of her hat with its broad navy blue brim.

Among the associate members present were: Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wearing a suit of white, latticed in navy blue, and a small white sailor with navy blue band and veil; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wearing a navy blue dress, figured in rose-colored petals; Lucille Foster McMillin, in a costume of soft green tone; Mrs. Harry King, the former Isabella Greenway, who wore a British tan print figured in nautical designs of white; Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, wearing a white figured frock and a broad-brimmed white straw hat, and Mrs. Edwin A. Harriman, in a blue and white print and a white hat.

Although the reception was really restricted to club members, there were three guests. Two were distinguished newspaper women visiting in the Capital, Miss Eva Lis Wuorio, of the Toronto Evening Telegram, who is here to cover the visit of Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, and the other, Miss Maria Zakrzewska, of Warsaw, Poland. The latter is writing feature articles on her observations in the United States and from here goes to South America, to prepare articles particularly on the immigration situation. Although she has been in this country but a short time, she speaks English well. Miss Wuorio, whose accent suggested some other country than Canada, explained that she was a native of Finland.

The third guest was Mrs. Frank Hayes Gore, of Kerrville, Tex., who was living in Persia at the same time that Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie resided there, and she attended the tea as the guest of Mrs. Imbrie, who is an associate member.

Mrs. Roderick Triplett, of Portsmouth, Va., who is here to cover the royal visit for the Portsmouth Star and who is a nonresident member of the club, also was among those present, having accompanied Mrs. Louise Hartley Wassell.

Moral Re-armament Topic Of Speakers at Zonta Luncheon

MORAL REARMAMENT was discussed at the luncheon of the Zonta Club at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday. The speakers were Mrs. Gudrun Egebjerg, who is a journalist in Copenhagen, Denmark, and a member of the Zonta Club there; Mrs. Ben Snellman, of Finland, and Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, of Alexandria, Va. The two foreign visitors were introduced by Miss Frances Root, daughter of Bishop Root, formerly of Hankow, China, and all are here in conection with the conference on moral rearmament. Miss Mary Sigman, president of the club, presided.

Miss Egebjerg emphasized the need for exemplifying in individual life the ideals desirable for nations. She told of a woman member of the Danish parliament who had promoted progressive legislation by emphasizing the points on which opposing parties agreed rather than those on which their platforms differed.

Among the guests were Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Woman's Council of the Federation of Churches; Mrs. Dorothy Hulsizer, the Misses Betty Howe, Martha Edwards, Ann Cross, Laura Belle Wilson and Edith M. Beattie.

DR. LOUISE TAYLER-JONES entertained the Wellesley Club at a picnic last night at her country home in McLean, Va. Mrs. Ellsworth Miner, Mrs. Harry Caton and Mrs. Charles Brooks assisted and Miss Mabel Holgate led the singing of Wellesley songs.

MRS. WILLIAM R. RAMSAY, 3053 Sixteenth street, was hostess yesterday at the final meeting of the Starmont Aid for Tuberculosis, at which Mrs. Andrew Stewart was elected president. Other new officers of the auxiliary unit are Mrs. Ann Zaruba and Mrs. Margaret Gauges, vice presidents; Mrs. Joanna Hynson, chaplain; Mrs. Ethel Toth, historian; Mrs. Beulah C. Mumford, sergeant at arms; Mrs. Emma M. Warren, property custodian, and Mrs. Pauline Chambers and Mrs. Gladys Scriviner, color bearers.

Jewish Home in Palestine Urged by Mrs. Pool

Jews throughout the world must have more than a cultural and spiritual interest in Palestine; the door should be open to every Jew who needs a home, Mrs. David de Sola Pool, of New York, first vice president of Hadassah, woman's Zionist organization, told members of the local chapter yesterday. Mrs. Pool, who addressed the 700 guests at their annual spring luncheon at the Mayflower, declared this was no time to relinquish the struggle to establish a homeland there.

She declared the White Paper issued by the Chamberlain government a few weeks ago "has aspects which transcend Jewish interests and may affect the whole of civilization."

Mrs. Pool asserted the Arabs had nothing to fear from the Jews, and that, in the beginning the Arabs had expressed no opposition to the Balfour declaration. She pointed out its benefits to both peoples, and added that the Jews must make terms with the Arabs, that "we must do more to conciliate them and convince them of the sincerity of Jewish aims."

Mrs. Raphael Tourover, retiring president of the Washington Hadassah, presided at the luncheon, the closing event of her three-year administration. The organization has grown to a membership of 1,180 during the past season. Mrs. Tourover was honored by the chapter with the presentation of a gift of $100 to the Jewish National Fund in her name, which will mean the inscription of her name in the golden book of the fund at Jerusalem. She was also presented with a Bible and a silver tray. Mrs. Moe Offenberg, the incoming president, assumed the presidency at the close of the luncheon program.

Mrs. Edward Ostrow was chairman of the affair, assisted by a large committee. New and retiring officers and presidents of other Jewish women's organizations of the city were seated at the head table.

The program included music by Miss Hilda Zetzer, of Baltimore, who sang, accompanied by Frederic Weaver.

District Red Cross Receives Portrait Of Miss Boardman

More than 200 members of the American Red Cross gathered in Service Hall of the District of Columbia Chapter House yesterday afternoon to witness the presentation of a portrait of Miss Mabel Boardman, executive secretary of the national organization, to the District Chapter.

The background is gold and blue.

Both Miss Boardman and Miss Burdette were honor guests at the ceremony. The presentation was made by Col. George B. McClellan, and the portrait, which is the gift of friends of Miss Boardman, was received by Earl Nash for the chapter.

In the company were Gen. F. R. Keefer, volunteer chairman of the District of Columbia Chapter; Mrs. Keefer, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Swift, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Miss Margaret Lower, field director at the Walter Reed Medical Center; Mrs. Philip Young, Mrs. Albert N. District Courts Streamline Civil Activities

Docket Two Years Behind; Pretrial Conferences Ordered

The streamlined procedure of informal, pretrial hearings was ordered yesterday by the District Court in an effort to dispose of the 5,000 civil cases which clog its dockets.

The court has fallen more than two years behind in its trial schedule of civil cases, although the criminal calendar has been kept up to date.

The congested docket was blamed on inadequate personnel, now partly relieved by the addition of two new justices, and on the antiquated legal system under which the court operated until September last year, when the Supreme Court promulgated the new rules of Federal procedure.

The new rules, announced by Chief Justice Wheat, provide for hearings presided over by a judge, with a view to seeing whether the case can be settled without a formal trial and, if not, whether the lawyers cannot agree on some of the facts, thus shortening the trial.

Justice Laws prepared an exhaustive report on pretrial procedure in State courts and in England. His report was submitted several weeks ago.

Persons involved in lawsuits will be required to attend the pretrial conferences just as they would trials. This will be enforced by dismissals or defaults for failure to appear. Postponement after the pretrial conference is forbidden.

Rep. Boykin Conceals Tragedy While Daughter Is Married

MR. AND MRS. RILEY SMITH

No one except Representative Frank W. Boykin (Democrat), of Alabama, knew there had been a bereavement in the family 24 hours before, when his daughter, Frances, was married to Riley Smith of Greenwood, Miss., in Alexandria, Tuesday night. And Mrs. Smith departed on her wedding trip undisturbed by thoughts of death, while Boykin quietly took a plane for Mobile to arrange for the funeral of his mother, Mrs. J. C. Boykin.

It was the second time within a few months in which Boykin had taken quietly, and said nothing until it could be said with mercy, news that reached him in the midst of festive activities.

The last time was at the Congressional reception at the White House, which Boykin attended with his wife and daughter. While there he received information that his son had been mortally wounded while on a hunting trip. As the family made its early departure from the reception, Representative Boykin said nothing of the real reason that impelled him to take them home.

Briggs Signs With CIO and 70,000 Go Back

Contract Specifies Union as Exclusive Bargaining Agency

Detroit, June 7.—A contract unprecedented in the automotive industry was ratified by the rank and file of the United Automobile Workers Union (C. I. O.) Briggs local today and 70,000 workers were called back to their jobs after nearly three weeks of idleness.

The contract was new to the automobile industry because it gave the U. A. W. exclusive bargaining rights. Contracts with other large factories provide for representation of union members only.

In the prolonged negotiations since the start of the U. A. W. strike in seven Briggs plants the union held out for a union shop clause until a compromise was effected with exclusive bargaining.

The strike and subsequent negotiations apparently were the first moves in an attempt by the U. A. W.-C. I. O. to gain exclusive bargaining rights for all workers in major automobile plants and thereby crush Homer Martin's rival U. A. W., which this week became affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Remember when . .

Dad was the only man in the world . . . the man who had an answer to all your questions. Remember when you timidly and reluctantly brought Dad your first report card—first he frowned, then shook his head, and said, "better luck next time, son."

Remember as you went through school how Dad took an interest in everything you did—how his practical advice made everything seem brighter and easier. Remember when you graduated from high school . . . there was Dad in the first row with a big proud smile all over his face—"that's my boy."

Remember, in college, when you wanted to join the fraternity . . . you could depend on Dad for that extra allowance. Then you graduated . . . Dad was older then . . . but he was just as proud as ever, even more so. Then that talk with Dad about your career . . . remember his helpful suggestions.

You're out in the world now, making your own living . . . but every time Dad sees you or hears from you he remembers when. He remembers . . . but do you remember? Dad never did expect anything—he doesn't now . . . but just watch his face light up when you show your appreciation and remembrance . . . to show that you have remembered

Joanna Huntington Is Presented To Capital Society at Large Tea

Blond, Slender Debutante Wears White Frock With Full Skirt; Mother Receives With Her in Library

By Dudley Harmon

THE FIRST OF THE SPRING SEASON'S bumper crop of debutantes, Miss Joanna Huntington, was presented to Capital society yesterday afternoon at a large tea given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington.

Blonde, slender, with the poise which all young ladies seem, somehow, to have mysteriously acquired these days, Miss Huntington promises to be one of the most attractive of this month's debutante group, which also includes Miss Joan Wilkinson, Miss Patricia Hurley, Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor, Miss Rosemary Merrill and Miss Nancy Glover. She has just finished exams at Smith College where she is a sophomore. Mrs. Huntington is a trustee of the college and leaves today to attend commencement exercises and reunion.

Mrs. Huntington's having planned the tea as an indoor affair was probably one of the reasons why the weather yesterday was so perfect. Nevertheless, the 386 guests spilled out onto the porch and the shady lawn surrounding the residence.

The debutante chose to wear the traditional white, and had chosen a frock of embroidered marquisette, with a full skirt, puffed sleeves, and a narrow sash of blue velvet ribbon. Her bouquet was an old-fashioned nosegay of yellow roses, blue forget-me-nots and gardenias surrounded by a frill of Alencon lace and satin. A single strand of pearls was her only ornament.

Mrs. Huntington, who received with her daughter in the library, wore a flowered chiffon in shades of yellow, white and green, and a corsage of yellow and white roses. The room was massed with flowers sent the debutante—bouquets of yellow roses lay on the mantelpiece, the bookshelves were covered with sprays of gladioli and other flowers, and on the columned porch adjoining were masses of pink carnations and other blossoms.

Miss Merrill Wears White

Several of the young girls assisting chose to wear frocks of white organdy. Miss Rosemarry Merrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, who "comes out" at a tea tomorrow, and Miss Phyllis Booth were dressed alike in long, full skirted dresses of this material, with which they wore tiny flower hats. Miss Edith Huntington, charming, dark-haired younger daughter of the house, also assisted, wearing blue organdy dotted with tiny white figures and a corsage of roses. Other friends of the debutante, who helped at the party, were Miss Jean Wallace, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry Wallace; Miss Peggy Houghteling, Miss Mary Jackson, Miss Betty Drayton, Miss Joan Wilkinson, Miss Edith Pearson and Miss June Spencer, of Worcester, Mass., attractive fellow-student of Miss Huntington at Smith. Miss Spencer wore white organdy with narrow bands of black lace.

Pouring tea during the afternoon were Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Edouard Feer, wife of the Counselor of the Swiss Legation; Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Ridley McLean, Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Mrs. Croswell Garlington, Mrs. Smith Hempstone, Mrs. John L. Proctor, Mrs. Levi Cooke, Mrs. John W. Burke, Mrs. A. Camp Stanley, Mrs. William E. Pearson, Mrs. Lloyd P. Shippen, Mrs. Grant Rafter and Mrs. John Spaulding Flannery.

Residential Society Well Represented

Mrs. Huntington, who is the daughter of the late Frank Carpenter, famous travel writer, spent her girlhood and much of her later life in the Capital, so much of "old Washington" predominated among yesterday's guests. Mrs. Huntington, too, has written a number of works of geography and children's fairy tales, and was recently named president of the Society of Women Geographers. She lived abroad for a number of years when Mr. Huntington, who is also well known as a writer, was attached to the United States Embassy in Russia before the World War.

To return to the guests. They included Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. John Hyde and Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, who were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Patricia Morris, a debutante of last winter.

Mr. Houghteling, who is commissioner of immigration, accompanied his wife to the party. He knew the Huntingtons years ago in Russia before the revolution.

Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Solicitor General, represented the New Deal, and Gen. and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, Mrs. Hutchinson I. Cone, Rear Admiral and Mrs. David Sellers, and Gen. Frank Parker were among members of the Army and Navy set present.

Mrs. Joshua Evans Among the Guests

Mrs. Joshua Evans, whose daughter Marianna, is an attractive member of the younger set, was in the company, and other guests included Mrs. Henry Grady, Dr. and Mrs. William C. Moore, Commander and Mrs. Stephen B. Robinson, Mrs. Wilson Lee, Mrs. Charles F. Wilson, Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Mrs. Dwight Chandler and her debutante daughter, Miss Betty Chandler; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Sterrett, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meem, Mrs. Lawrence Baker, Miss Virginia Hunt, Capt. and Mrs. W. R. Munroe, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, whose daughter Patricia, will make her debut at a tea a week from Saturday at Belmont, the Hurley home near Leesburg; Mrs. Howell Moorhead, and many others.

Mr. Walton attended Hampden-Sydney College and the University of Virginia. He is now connected with the United States Housing Authority here.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Socially Retiring Girl, College Graduate, Asks How to Deflect Unwanted Lovemaking

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl in my early 20's, a college graduate, interested in my profession and considered quite attractive in appearance. I am rather retiring socially, unless I know the group well, and in high school and the first two years of college my main thoughts were on my studies, leaving social life (especially with the opposite sex) to others. I made a better adjustment during the last two years at college, although I never became outstandingly popular. Consequently, I never learned the technique—acquired by most girls during their high school days—of handling men. So now I find myself in a position brought about, I believe, by trying not to be too stiff and cold.

I have been going with a young man who says he loves me. He is ardent, consistent and constant in declaring his love. And while I don't love him, and have told him so, I have also said that he is the finest boy I have ever known and that I think a great deal of him. In spite of this frank statement, I have somehow permitted—or else couldn't prevent—what I believe to be too much liberty on his part, so that now he expects a degree of embracing and kissing which I can't seem to stop, although I definitely don't enjoy it.

What should I do to remedy this situation? Could our friendship continue without that part, which is distasteful to me? I have always felt that love and marriage are for persons who are wiser and more mature than we are, and I have told him so. Could it be possible that, my ambitions and my satisfaction in my work are so absorbing as to keep me from loving him, or any man? He has all the qualifications I would have thought necessary. I feel that some remedial steps must be taken and will appreciate your advice. PUZZLED GIRL.

Cause of Complaisance

DEAR PUZZLED GIRL: Your ambitions and the satisfactions you find in your work cannot be held responsible for your failure to love this man, or any man. More likely, your disposition to "lose yourself" (as the saying goes) in your job stems from a subconscious conviction that you may never be able to meet the requirements of a mutually satisfying love relationship.

There is some evidence to indicate that you are what is known to the medical profession as an emotionally "frigid" woman; that is to say, a woman whose essential capacity for experiencing and responding to love is frozen in the paralyzing grip of such complex inhibiting factors as fear, ignorance, prudery, inordinate shyness, etc., that are the result of ill-advised early training and example.

It may seem odd (to you and to others that an emotionally frigid woman (alleged) might "permit a degree of embracing and kissing which is definitely distasteful"—but the ironic fact of the matter, which students of behavior have recorded, on the basis of delinquency surveys, is that the gauche and inhibited woman (or girl) falls easier victim to compromising or unwanted advances than does her more ardent sister, who finds her emotional awareness to be her greatest protection. Instinctively she takes her own feelings into account, in any tentative affectional exchange. If the approach is subtly distasteful, immediately she withdraws; whereas if, on the other hand, it is quite the reverse, she imposes restraint as a mutual safeguard.

No suitor, however impetuous, thinks less of a woman who imposes such restraint if he senses (or is given to understand) that her diffidence springs from an intensity rather than a paucity of feeling—as it does, of course, in the case of the woman who is attuned to love. Unfortunately, however, the frigid type of woman has no signals of a psychic sort to guide her along the labyrinthine ways of the treasure-hunt of courtship. Secretly baffled by (and somewhat ashamed of) her habitual lack of responsiveness, she seeks to cover up or to compensate for this distressing passivism or negativism by (a) either simulating an answering ardor; or (b) by following the man's lead in a spiritless way, which latter seems to be the attitude that you have taken in this instance.

Either attitude is wrong, leading almost inevitably to some painful denouement—subjective or objective. Such pretense works an injury to the person deceived (or tacitly encouraged), and does continual violence to the psyche and conscience of the other. Since you do not love this man, you should never have suffered his fervent attentions. In so doing, you were leading him to believe either that you did love him, despite what you said; or that you were lacking in fastidious self-regard. And also, of course, you were progressively abusing your own spirit and debasing your person.

The truth of the matter, I daresay, is that you have put up with this situation as much from desire to hold a presentable beau (even at the price of shrinkingly enduring his love-making) as because you lack that touchstone of feeling (and perhaps also of social experience) which would promptly tell you the difference between a kindred personality and one that is fundamentally alien.

Since you are in your 20's and still feel that "love and marriage are for persons who are wiser and more mature" than yourself, one can only suppose that you are definitely on the under-developed side, psychologically. Persons in their 20's are (or should be) sufficiently mature to experience love and consider marriage.

This attitude of yours, plus the implication of emotional frigidity, plus the comparatively seclusive life you led in high school and in college, leads me to believe that you need psychiatric help in working out your problem. You need guidance in the matter of growing up, emotionally and psychologically. Your lack of courage and honesty in this relationship is probably not an isolated intance of personal inadequacy to the demands of a situation. It is more likely symptomatic of your whole faltering approach to life. I suggest you tackle the problem in its entirety by enlising the advisory services of Dr. Elmer Klein or another of the staff psychiatrists at the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone ADams 1033. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Overweight and Personal Daintiness Problems Solved in Summer by Brassiere-Shields

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

JUST how much of a foundation have you prepared for yourself during summertime heat? Have you already taken precautions for those hot weather problems—personal daintiness and overweight? If not, here are the answers. First, your brassiere—you should have two or three or four to change into against those melting hot days to come. The guaranteed washable bra in the correct size for bust proportions is desirable for absolute comfort and mental assurance in summertime, when active play takes more energy out of a person than at any other season.

Here is our recommendation, illustrated in the lower photograph, above. It is a combination of bra and shields, a practical answer to real underarm protection. Once such an easy-to-slip-into combine is adopted, the old habit of sewing shields into perishable summer sheers will become ancient history in your life. This particular bra form is of stout double net and attached nainsook boilable shields, although the design itself is anything but stout. The V-front has a streamlined back and kitten-soft uplifts placed where they do the most good. With this type of bra, the lightweight pantie girdle for active sports is cool and practical.

The woman of embonpoint, however, needs a sturdy, yet lightweight foundation—that is, if she expects those "spare tires" to be subdued under the revealing eye of summer sun. One such foundation of special interest to determined reducers, on a budget, is the daytime and evening one pictured here. It is a scientifically designed "diminisher" of rubber. It slims as its firms the flesh due to needlepoint perforations which aid evaporation of natural perspiration. Fortunately the rubber has a fabric backing which prevents chafing to a certain extent, even though you can feel the hips melting away. Sticklers for personal daintiness find that this foundation is every bit as sudsable as the becoming size 14 frocks you'll soon be wearing in place of the 16 or 18 you are now billowing about in.

Broiler Holds Heat to Minimum In Summer

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

THE BLACK BEAST of the kitchen in the days of the old-fashioned stove was the broiler. It was sure to produce a smoky, fat-splattering job. It's quite another story today in the smokeless insulated broiler of a modern range, for the temperature controlled burner performs to perfection behind a closed door.

Broiling, now one of the quickest and coolest ways of preparing a meal in summer, is a boon to the homemaker and never fails in its appetite appeal. The sizzling heat of the broiler develops a delicious flavor in steaks and chops and the speedy searing gives an attractive, brown, outer surface, leaving the inside with that desired juiciness. A simple meal, but hard to beat when properly done, is kidney veal chops, served with mashed potatoes, chive flavored, and broiled tomatoes. Green peas would be a grand build-up to this menu and an aristocratic ending would be apricot honey pie.

Apricot Honey Pie

Blend 3 tablespoons cornstarch and 3 tablespoons flour with ¼ cup milk. Add ½ cup honey, ¼ teaspoon salt and 3 cups milk. Cook in double boiler over low heat, stirring constantly until thick. Beat 2 egg yolks. Stir the custard into the yolks. Cook 5 minutes longer. Cool. Beat 2 egg whites stiff. Add 6 tablespoons sugar, beating until dissolved. Fold in 3 tablespoons pureed apricots. Fill pastry shell with custard mixture. Swirl meringue over top. Bake in moderate oven 325 degrees, 12 to 15 minutes, and the meringue will be puffy.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Backward Swing Exercise Streamlines Hips Too Much Sitting Is Cause of Bulkiness

YOU LOVE TO eat and you hate to exercise . . . but you want slim hips. Well, you can have your calories and keep streamlined with a minimum of exercise, provided you use the right technique.

To be in proportion, the hips should be no more than three inches larger than the bust if you are a tall girl; and no more than two inches larger than the bust if you are short. Circle the tape around the largest portion to include the derriere—it's all hips!

Too Much Sitting Bad

Once you know the worst about this unruly measurement and the exercise movements that will take it down, streamlining is a cinch. The gluteus maximus, the massive muscle on the back of the hips, is the one that brings the leg up and back in a swing from the hips. And how often do you do that in the course of a day? It just isn't done! And that, together with too much sitting, accounts for the preponderance of bulky hips.

As a hip slimmer this backward swing has no equal. There are three different ways of doing it, and the easiest way—and the one recommended for the very heavy woman—is given first:

POSITION: Lying face downward on the floor, legs straight down and together.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the leg straight down on the floor, use the hip muscles to raise the right leg slowly and as high as possible. Hold for a second, lower to the floor and repeat with the other leg.

A tendency to sway back calls for a slightly different version, and you need a strong table for this one!

POSITION: Stand with the front of the hips against the table, bend down and rest the trunk on the table.

MOVEMENT: Keep the legs straight and raise first the right, then the left, in a high backward kick from the floor.

Variation Is Fun

The third variation is more fun and will appeal to the majority of those with overweight hips:

POSITION: Stand in an open doorway, hands gripping door frame at either side. Do not have the hands too high, or they will interfere with the forward swing of the trunk.

MOVEMENT: Swing alternate legs from the hips in high backward kicks, letting the trunk come forward in the effort to bring the leg up as high as possible. Continue for 25 counts, gradually working up to 100.

These exercises are unexcelled for toning the gluteus maximus and reducing fat on this part of the hipline. Tomorrow's exercises will deal with bulges on the sides of the hips and how to streamline the thighs.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Fashion Design Schools Intrigue New Yorkers

New York, June 7.

IT SEEMS TO ME that there have never been so many schools for fashion design as there are at present in this town. Perhaps it is a natural outgrowth of the current trend toward the careers for women here. Such design is always held up to women who would work as the perfect goal.

ALICE HUGHES

Obviously, it is impossible for me to see them all, but I did manage to visit an unusually interesting one this month held at the famous Cooper Union. This school of design presented 28 costumes this year, several of them of exceptional value. Undoubtedly the star pupil was Mrs. Mae Cooper, a lovely looking young matron who scored a striking double in the fashion show.

One was a picturesque mother and daughter costume designed by Mrs. Cooper for herself and her 7-year-old daughter, Anita. The ensemble was adapted from a Swiss dairyman's suit, and has two jackets to give it wider use. Not content with this triumph, Mrs. Cooper then stepped out with a design for the bridal costume which furnished the finale of the fashion parade.

It certainly was Mrs. Cooper's night, and you might almost think she owned Cooper Union if you did not remember that it was founded a great many years ago by the philanthropist and educator, Peter Cooper.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: A few days ago I went to see Therese Bonney, and as usual, she was packing her great crate of cameras. This time she is off to do a protographic assignment at the Olympic Games in Finland. Therese is the girl who owns a beloved Renoir painting which she carries with her from continent to continent. But now she leaves it in New York all the time, for fear of a European war.

ELEANOR HOLM is authority for the statement that the constant wetting of the hair does more to age a lady swimmer than does Father Time. The girls in the swimming show at the fair cannot wear caps, since they would interfere with hearing the beat of the music. As a result the shapely young ladies in the show need constant hair treatments to relieve the deadening effects of too much water.

The Old Grads

THE YOUNGER SET:

"Hello there, Anne!"

"Oh, hello Marjorie! How are you?"

"I'm just fine. Is Carolyn here?"

"No, she couldn't leave the twins."

"Don't tell me it's twins!"

"Yes, and Jane's just had another girl."

"Of all things! Isn't that outrageous! Say, is Annette married yet?"

"No, but she's running round with some old bachelor—they say he's 35 years old."

"Has he any money?"

"Well, I hope so. What do you hear from Esther?"

"Oh, she's having this perfectly marvelous trip, and she's met this perfectly grand man in London."

"How wonderful! Did you know Marie was engaged?"

"No! Who to?"

"Some man she met in Yellowstone Park. They say his people have scads of money."

"Well, what about Harriet?"

"Oh, she's just as unattractive as ever. All she goes in for is ice skating and badminton."

"Is Margie married yet?"

"No, she's taken up social work."

"Well, now, tell me all about yourself. Are you engaged?"

"We-ll, not exactly.

"Say, let's go someplace where we can really talk."

"Oh, hello Martha!"

"Why, hello Gertrude! How are you?"

"Just fine. How's Tom?"

"Tom?"

"Oh, I mean Arthur. You know, you went so long with Tom Clipper I always think of him when I see you. Well, how is Arthur?"

"Just fine. How's Joe?"

"Oh, I'm not married to Joe any more. My name's Bounce now. I married Charlie Bounce."

"Oh-h!"

"Yes, I've been visiting his people in New York, and then Betty and I——"

"Betty?"

"Yes, my daughter. She's graduating from high school."

"Doesn't time fly! I was just saying to Ruth this morning——"

"Ruth?"

"Yes, my daughter. This is her first year in college here——"

"Don't they grow up! Katherine and I were just talking about that on the way down here——"

"Katherine?"

"Yes, Charlie's sister. She came with me, and then we're going to pick up Paul——"

"Paul?"

"Yes, my oldest son. He's at military academy. Say, when are you going home?"

"Well, Ruth and I are going to meet Arthur and David and Ross in New York——"

"David and Ross?"

"Yes, the two boys, and then we're going to see Lillian and Ralph——"

"Oh, yes; your sister."

"And take Bert and Susan and Dora—that's their three children——"

"Heavens! How time does fly;"

THE OLDER SET:

"Oh, hello!"

"Why—hello!"

"I bet you don't know me?"

"Why I do, too! You're . . . you're . . . well, I know your face perfectly, but——"

"Don't you remember Lucy Sparks?"

"Oh, of course! Perfectly! It was just that your name escaped me. Well, say, you haven't changed a bit!"

"Neither have you. The minute I saw you I said to myself, 'There's Mary Platt——'"

"No—Mary Marsh."

"Oh, that's right! It was just that I had the names confused. But I knew you all right. Say—who is that woman over there . . . the large one in the flowered print . . . and the snood?"

"Wait . . . Let's see. Oh, I believe that's one of the Juniper girls . . . I believe it's Ada Juniper."

"I think it's Sally Juniper—wait, here she comes."

"I know it's Ada."

"Maybe you're right. Hello, there, Ada Juniper. You know Mabel Platt—I mean Marsh. Well, Ada, how are you? . . . What? . . . Oh, that's right, you are Sally! Well, Sally, you haven't changed a bit!"

Camera Art Self-Taught

A RED-LETTER DAY when Joe and Jane announced their engagement! But the picture you took of them turned out a dud—because you forgot to roll the film up!

Why risk spoiling pictures that mean so much to you? Be professional! Follow a definite routine each time you take a picture: 1. Study scene in your viewfinder. 2. Focus, set lens opening, shutter speed. 3. Glance again at the viewfinder. 4. Click the shutter. 5. Roll film up to the next number.

No danger then of snapping before you're ready, of taking one picture on top of another.

Other boners you can avoid as easily. A pet shot turns out a blur? Perhaps you moved the camera. Try steadying it against the body—hold your breath as you click. For an exposure longer than 1-25 second, rest camera on a solid support. Or do you see dark blobs on your print? Maybe you held a finger over the lens.

And when errors are conquered—try for striking shots! By knowing photography pointers you can get them—even with a box camera.

On cloudy days, in the shade, or early morning or late afternoon a box camera will do wonders if you use supersensitive panchromatic film. But don't come closer than ten feet to your subject unless you have portrait adjustments. Action? Yes, you may get a slowly moving figure if it is at a distance or is moving directly toward or away from you.

Kate Smith To Sing Ballads For Sovereigns

Social and Business Leaders Pour Into Capital for Ceremonies

Kate Smith came back to her home town, Washington, yesterday, this time to sing before a King.

It was a reminiscent and not exuberant Kate Smith who stepped from a train into Union Station—a woman who had made good on the lilt of a moon coming over a mountain and now for the height of it all—to sing for a King and his Queen a group of songs near to a President's sentimental heart.

She carried the group of songs in her mind, rattled them off when asked what they were . . . "Home On the Range," the Irish song, "Macushla," the English song, "These Foolish Things Remind Me of You," "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life."

"And I will sing 'When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain.' The President requested that I sing that one, too."

Not a Bit Flustered

But Kate Smith was mostly reminiscent. This because she came to Washington from Greenville, a small Virginia town, when she was two weeks old; and then went to school here and sang at all manner of obscure church functions and at obscurer social gatherings in homes. That was some time ago, she said. And now she was asked to come back to her home town and sing tonight for a King.

She said she wasn't a bit flustered. She would stand there and sing "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain" just as she has pounded it into the heart of America for years. She would sing, she said, just as she always does. She would give the King and his Queen her best—just as she always has done for the American public.

Someone in her party reminded that Miss Smith has sung before America's great many times—before Woodrow Wilson, Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Hotels Overflowing

Before 7:05 p. m., when Miss Smith arrived, the highways, air routes and railroads were pouring in an estimated 250,000 people, all anxious for a view of the visiting royalty. Their conditions of life varied more than their means of travel. Hotels were overflowing. Available window space that fronts on Pennsylvania avenue, the route of the parade to the White House, was reserved.

In the hotels were America's most famous names. John D. Rockefeller, jr., was at the Carlton Hotel, declining to comment on his visit. America's Ambassador to Germany at the outbreak of the World War, James W. Gerard, was at the Mayflower to eat a leisurely dinner and retire early for the night. He wore a natty brown suit and a carnation in his lapel.

To him, the visit of the British royalty was bound to spell goodwill. He would be at the garden party. But he had seen the King and Queen before, having been the special Ambassador of the President at the Coronation.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney arrived at 10:30 p. m. at the Shoreham, declining comment. Mrs. Robert Bacon, New York society woman, at the same hotel, declined to be photographed, but said that she would attend the garden party in simple clothes. She said she didn't know there would be a parade. Down at the Carlton Hotel Carl de Gersdorff, New York attorney and former law associate of the President, said he would go to the party, wearing silk hat and cutaway.

At the Willard Hotel, where more than 60 parties will view the parade from suites overlooking the Avenue, Sergio Osmena, vice president of the Philippine Islands, said he had been in Washington about six months on official business and would see the parade from his window.

W. J. Acklin, of Wilmington, Del., came down with a party. The Raleigh Hotel windows will accommodate a view of the parade for Dr. John Stuart Bryan, president of the College of William and Mary, and a party he is bringing to Washington. J. P. Morgan and E. R. Stettinius were possible arrivals today at the Shoreham. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt were registered at the Mayflower, while the White House obtained reservations at the Carlton for Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt. Admiral and Mrs. William V. Pratt, of Belfast, Me., were at the Mayflower, as was Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Lomax to Sing Native Songs Before King and Queen

Youthful Alan Lomax, who once sat under the Texas stars and heard in the cowboys' songs the poetry of America, will sing those songs tonight for the British King and Queen.

The restrictions forbid Lomax to say what songs he will sing. He can't say what sort of clothes he will wear when he walks out, guitar under arm, before the royal visitors in the White House. Actually, he can't even say that he will come forward with the guitar.

"I'm sorry to be so disappointing," Lomax said yesterday. But he did say that he wasn't "jittery."

If he was that way, he never would have collected the several thousand folk songs and the ballads that can only be found down in the hard by-ways, in the tough roots of America. Those songs don't come from drawing rooms, the record of Lomax shows.

His researches, in collaboration with his father, John a Lomax., carried him into the Appalachians, where the mountaineers will sing when properly oiled, and also will chase the song collector out if his necktie doesn't look right. The route went along to Haiti, where different moods have to be contended with; to other West Indian islands, where they might sing for a song collector and then again might exercise some very primitive tricks of giving him the rush.

Lomax toured the prisons and the deep bayous of the South, getting friendly first with the wardens, then with the prisoners. He discovered "Lead Belly" and a gold mine of songs in the big swamp Negro. His collection grew, from the somber funeral airs to the cowboys' lament, to the man singing of Gulf Coast blues, a vast collection of music native to this country.

The youthful researcher is a graduate of Harvard, a native of Texas and is associated with the music division of the Library of Congress.

Tourists Raise Population to More Than a Million

More than 300,000 Americans will journey to Washington this morning on the chance they will see the reigning monarchs of a British dynasty whose rule on these shores their ancestors stopped with a war 163 years ago.

By the time the royal train of King George and Queen Elizabeth pulls into Union Station at 11 a. m., Washington will have grown overnight into a city of 1,000,000 or more persons, according to official estimates last night.

Curtis Hodges, director of the Board of Trade's promotion department, estimated the influx of visitors at between 300,000 and 400,000.

Railroads and buses and airlines were enjoying a business windfall, equaling and, in some cases, exceeding tourist profits during Easter and Cherry Blossom week-ends. Patrick E. Porter, night manager of the Washington Tourist Camp, where 1,000 lodged in tents and trailers, said he counted at least a half dozen cars from Canada.

Scotland Yard's Beau Ideal: Hat of Silk, He Guards King

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Niagara Falls, Ontario, June 7.—He has been called the beau ideal of Scotland Yard, a figure out of A. Conan Doyle's most thrilling pages, but even so it is doubtful whether Washington will recognize him for what he is.

For Washington will se Chief Constable Albert Canning of Scotland Yard, wearing a silk topper when he arrives tomorrow.

Canning it is who is primarily responsible for the safety of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth on their history-making tour of the New World. He is a 6-footer and weighs about 185 pounds—or, as he puts it, "About 14 stone."

Besides him, there are two other Scotland Yard men—Chief Inspector David Cameron, a tall, dark, never-smiling Scotsman who guards the King, and Inspector Frank Giles, a tall, light-haired man of 42 who guards the Queen. Like Canning, both are well groomed, and except for their roving eyes you would have a hard time distinguishing them from the lords in waiting and the equerries.

Chief Constable Canning, born in London 51 years ago, never wanted to be anything but a detective. After serving as a cavalryman (he was only 14 at the time) in the Boer war, he joined the London police force and quickly was put into plain clothes. He made the memorable "salesmanship" tour with with the Prince of Wales to South America in 1925.

"What about some of your most thrilling cases, Mr. Canning."

"Well, I think you have a very jolly city in Washington. I was there last April, and I fell in love with it. A top-hole city it is indeed."

Guldahl 6-1 Choice as Open Starts Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, June 7.—Mr. Alva Bradley, who operates the Cleveland Indians as a none too profitable side line to his railroad and realty business, has evolved a new plan for beating the New York Yankees. He hopes to legislate them out of the pennant.

POVICH

He thinks a long step can be taken in that direction by revamping the American League's option rule which permits a club to send a promising young ball player back to the minors as the Yankees recently sent Outfielder Joe Gallagher.

"Certainly, the Gallagher case has given me my idea," states Mr. Bradley frankly. "Seven other clubs in the American League, including my own, could have used Gallagher, but what happens? The Yankees won't let him loose and a player who ought to be in the big leagues is back at Newark while the American League suffers.

"The entire structure of the league is going to pot because of the concentration of talent with the Yankees. The players they can't use, they keep strings on and deprive other clubs of talent that would tighten the race. We don't want any players that the Yankees are using, but we ought to put a stop to this dog-in-the manger business that's making the pennant race so one-sided."

Wants New Waiver Law

Bradley's plan is, briefly, to change the American League's option rule. Under his program, no club would be able to keep title to a player more than 30 days and then send him back to the minors without first obtaining waivers from the other major league teams.

"With a rule like that, Gallagher would have been saved for the American League," Bradley points out. "I will certainly attempt to promote it at our next league meeting. I have already talked with other club owners and they are heartily in favor, including Clark Griffith, the Washington owner."

Griffith may be in favor of the rule, but Bucky Harris laughs it off. Says Harris: "The only way to beat the Yankees, is to beat 'em out there on the ball field. You aren't going to do it by league legislation. Some of these people had better give up these silly plans of trying to beat the Yankees in the league meetings, and go out and get some ball players who will stand up to 'em out there on the field. That's the only way to lick 'em."

Nats Have Edge on Yankees

Harris may be talking a trifle big, but that's excusable. His Washington club is the only team which can show an edge over the Yankees this season. The Nats have, in fact, won three out of five games with the Yanks, who have slaughtered every other club in the league.

In the league meeting, Bradley will not only strike at the option rule that allows such as the Yanks to cover up their talent for future reference while other clubs suffer for lack of competent players, but he has another plan in mind. And it sounds more reasonable.

Bradley's second thought in the matter concerns the farm system of the Yankees. He would jam through the league meeting a law forbidding any major league club to operate two minor league teams in leagues of the same classification. It is, of course, a blow at the Yankees' ownership of the Newark and Kansas City clubs.

Those two teams are just about the best clubs in the minor leagues. The Newark Bears have had a monopoly on International League pennants in much the same manner that the Yanks have dominated the American League, and Kansas City is a standout in the American Association.

Predicts 30-Game Victory

By controlling clubs like Newark and Kansas City, the Yankees have a strangle hold on the best minor league talent, moans Bradley. "One class AA club should be enough for any major league team. When a big league outfit owns two such clubs, it turns too much talent in the same channel, and that means toward the Yankees."

Bradley, like virtually every other club owner in the league, has abandoned hope that the Yankee yoke can be tossed off by the league. "I wouldn't be surprised if the Yanks win the pennant by 30 games," he says. "They're that outstanding. The situation is killing off interest around the league and even the Yankees are not doing so well at the gate at home."

"What will it mean next year? It means, at least in our case, and probably with other club owners, that there will be a violent retrenchment. Next to the Yanks, we have the biggest pay roll in the league. Our players are more highly paid than the Tigers or the Red Sox. The average salary of the 25 men on our roster is over $10,000. That will have to come down. The money simply isn't coming in at the gate."

It all sounds like squawk week. A few days ago, Joe Cronin unloosed a wail on behalf of his Red Sox, a rapidly fading rival of the Yanks. "I'll tell you what is happening," Cronin told a Boston correspondent. "Every other club is conceding the pennant to the Yanks. They aren't pitching their best pitchers against New York. It's a battle for second place, and they're saving their best pitchers to work against the Red Sox. We've been seeing better pitching than the Yankees ever since the season started, because every club is trying to knock us off and letting the Yanks make a runaway with it."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 7.—Boxing has bred some bizarre blokes, strange men who by the power of their fists double-crossed their drab destinies and walked through lives as curious as that of the hero in "Lost Horizon." We ran across one of them today, plodding patiently through the hot macadam of Grover Whalen's World of Tomorrow. He was Kid McCoy, dapper in a white suit, an open collar, and gold rimmed glasses. He had flown on from Detroit to see his company's exhibit. He took in the Baer-Nova fight, too.

CONSIDINE

"Goodness," the 63-year-old veteran exclaimed, mildly, "I can't understand why those modern fellows are such bad boxers. They hit good enough, I guess, at least Louis does, but they can't box. Yet they've got everything, nowadays, from the time they can walk. I mean they got good instructors, good gyms and places where a fellow could learn to box. In my day we had to pick it up the best way we could.

"I got myself baptized when I was 18 years old, just to help my boxing," the ten-times-married old fighter recalled, "Yeah, baptized. You had to be a church-goer to join the Y. M. C. A. in Indianapolis. It was the only gym in the city then, so I got religion so I could get in.

"I took jobs that built me up, too. I dug ditches . . . to eat, of course . . . but also to strengthen my back muscles. And you know how I learned to hit with everything I had from my knees to my head? I used to keep a silver dollar between my knees and hold it there while I shadow-boxed, so that I could teach myself to throw everything I had into a punch, all at once. I used to keep another silver dollar on the top of my left hand during a workout, to teach me to keep it still and ready to jab, no matter how I danced around and swung my right."

They've had the Kid in a couple different types of clinks, once for plugging one of his wives, but it hasn't curdled his optimistic outlook on life or hampered his lively memory.

Heads for Johannesburg

"We didn't make the dough these modern fellows make, but I think we must've had a lot more fun," he mused, nibbling on a watery highball. "Like the time I beat Tommy Ryan and claimed the middleweight title. Well, there wasn't much doing around this country then, and I happened to read in a paper where two guys I never heard of fought for 9,000 pounds in Johannesburg, Africa. I made the next boat.

"Well, on the way over there I decided to work a little swindle. I figured if I changed my name I could win a lot of side bets, as well as the purses, so I became Harry Egan. I'm ambidextrous, you know, so I took a clumsy-looking southpaw stance when I got there. It looked like I'd make a million, maybe, but the day before my first fight came off the Police Gazette arrived there and they had a big picture of me on the front. I never forgive 'em for that."

The McCoy had a number of fights in Africa, including what must have been one of the most memorable in ring history. Some English colonials, visiting Johannesburg, offered him 800 pounds to come to a little trading post a thousand miles north of Johannesburg, to fight a 6-foot-6 inch Negro who was called the King of the Kaffirs.

Worked With Brick Bats

"The railroad only ran 500 miles on the way there," the old pug told us, without blinking. "Had to take a carriage the rest of the way. Well, we got there, by and by. Got there in the evening and this big fellow was working out. But instead of boxing gloves he and the sparring fellow had short clubs and they were going after each other like a couple of sabre fellows. Made me right uneasy.

"So I asked one of the British officers why the fellows were using clubs and he told me that that was the only way they could get anybody to fight this big monkey. He was too tough to hurt, if you only had your gloved fist to hit him with. Well, I looked him over and if there had been a train out of there I'd a caught it, like I used to catch those freights—on the fly. But when I got down as far as his big feet I saw he was barefooted, and a fellow told me he'd fight barefooted when he met me.

"So the day of the fight I got a box of carpet tacks from one of the stores and I planted a guy on this fellow's side of the ring and I told him to throw 'em under his feet as soon as I tapped myself twice on the head. Well, the bell rings and he got up with a growl, and I decided not to take no chance. So I tapped myself twice on the bean, quick, and then the fellow throws the whole box of tacks under the big fellow's feet as he started coming toward me.

"Well, sir, they were good tacks, because they even penetrated that big ape's tough feet. He let out a bellow, grabbed one foot and began picking them out of it, and while he was standing there on one leg I cranked up and hit him so hard on the chin that it hurt up to my armpit. He hardly even stopped picking them out, so I swung again and this time he went down and out.

"And I caught the next carriage out."

Players Fail To Crack Par In Practice

Cox, Houghton, Walper, Cunningham And Brownell in Philadelphia Event

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 7.—The toughest golf course the National Open field has tested since Oakmont closed its multiple hazard at dusk today, and tomorrow morning a crack field will start the three-day battle for the forty-third annual championship over Philadelphia Country Club's Spring Mill layout.

The practice field was a mass of divots as the pro and amateur big shots played a final practice round over the testing layout and then spent hours giving their games a final tuneup for the top show of them all.

Practice rounds, a feeble barometer for pre-tournament predictions, were led by John Rogers, Denver's tee-shot ace, who was one over the par of 69 with a 36, 34—70. Jimmy Hines, the Great Neck mentor, and P. G. A. champ Paul Runyan were next with 71s, while Leo Walper, the District's driving range mentor, had a 72.

Par Sacred Figure

Par will likely be a sacred figure when the chips are down, however, as the 6,786-yard layout is not suited for low scoring in its present condition. The rough, although trampled, is long, and the greens have a lightning touch. The course looks so tough that many of the big shots are talking as though they are afraid of it.

Gene Sarazen, always a threat, is willing to bet a Jersey cow that 287, nine over par, will take first prize Saturday afternoon. Bobby Cruikshank, the wee Richmond mentor, is willing to stay right in the clubhouse with a quartet of 73s. Some even go as high as 300, even 75's as being well up in the money.

However the two-time champion and first 6-1 favorite in open history, Ralph Guldahl, was unmoved and apparently still firmly convinced he will become the first three-time champion in succession in modern times. He played today with Tony Penna, Olin Dutra and Art Bell, and was out in 35, one over par, and back in 37 for 72. He is hitting the ball perfectly and is by far the most feared man in the field.

Familiar With Course

The District of Columbia representation, Wiffy Cox, Frank Cunningham, Leo Walper, Al Houghton and Bobby Brownell, are all fairly familiar with the layout and all voiced the same comment, "Plenty tough."

Walper, here for over a week, had a 72 today, and has a pair of 71s to his credit in the numerous trial rounds. Cox played his second 18 today and had a 74, in the company of former Champion Billy Burke, Frank Walsh and Max Marston. They all played somewhat the same, recording two syndicates apiece.

Cunningham, first off the tee at 8:15 a. m., may be the surprise package of the District quintet. The Burning Tree pro has not been scoring sensationally, but has been hitting the ball well and feels he's good for a 74 or better. And a 74 would give him ample satisfaction over the rest of the field, as he'll be through before many of them start.

Al Houghton, a practice companion of Cunningham and of Bobby Brownell, has a pair of fair rounds to his credit, while Brownell is due for his first good round tomorrow. Bobby and Otto Greiner, Baltimore amateur, have played together twice, but returned no cards, hitting two or more balls.

Picks Picard

Although Gudahl is the logical favorite, and Sammy Snead is hitting the ball like it is tied to a string, and Harry Cooper is due, our selection is Hershey, Pa.'s model-swinging Henry Picard, the chocolate kid. The odds are shifting around Guldahl, Snead, Hines, Nelson, Dudley, Cooper, Hogan, Sarazen, etc., but here's one big vote for a man who's won about everything else, and deserves the honors on "Derby Day."

Jerry May Give Billy Burke Luck in the National Open

Some golfers might object to the presence of a dog on a golf course, but not Billy Burke, National Open champion of 1931. The Cleveland pro, shown after a practice round with Jerry, his pet Shetland sheepdog, thinks his mascot carries all his luck. Burke, incidentally, will need it in the 1939 Open starting today over Philadelphia Country Club's course

DiMaggioBack, Yanks Defeat Chisox, 5 to 2

(Picture on Next Page.)

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 7.—An outfield shakeup which returned Joe DiMaggio to the line-up today put the New York Yankees back in winning form with a 5-to-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Making his first appearance in centerfield since being injured April 29, DiMaggio in his first time at bat tripled behind Tommy Henrich's single for New York's initial run.

He got no other hits, but in the fifth inning was intentionally walked to fill the bases and scored one of the Yankees' three runs in that frame when Ray Radcliff dropped Bill Dickey's fly, Lefty Thornton Lee made a wild pitch and George Selkirk sent a sacrifice fly to center.

New York's other run was scored by Joe Gordon on a squeeze play in the second inning with Lefty Gomez doing the bunting.

Although forced to retire after the seventh inning because of the heat, Gomez got credit for his fourth victory against two defeats. In the second inning he gave two passes which were followed by Radcliff's single and an infield out for Chicago's only runs.

All of the Sox's seven hits came from Gomez, with Johnny Murphy keeping out of trouble at the end. Lee, the loser, was removed in the sixth with none on base and one out. Vic Frazier worked until the ninth and Clint Brown finished.

What, Again? Giants Release Tony Lazzeri

New York, June 7 (AP).—Tony Lazzeri, the former star infielder of the New York Yankees, who in less than two full seasons has been shunted from the Chicago Cubs to Brooklyn Dodgers to the New York Giants, was given his unconditional release again today.

LAZZERI

The veteran made two of the Giants' four errors today, one of the fumbles letting in 2 runs, and in addition batters twice beat out bunts in his direction.

Lazzeri was signed by the Giants immediately after being turned loose in mid-May by the Dodgers, but did not play for New York until May 26 because of a lengthy attack of tonsilitis.

Lou Chiozza was expected to play third for the Giants tomorrow.

Pirates Sign Klein

Pittsburgh, June 7 (AP).—The Pittsburgh baseball club announced today the signing of Chuck Klein, veteran outfielder who was released by the Phillies.

$3,000,000 Sports Center Proposed Here

A proposal to build a $3,000,000 sports center at Twenty-fifth and K streets northwest was presented yesterday to the District Zoning Commission.

Representing a group interested in developing the project, Joseph R. McCuen, an attorney, said the sports center would provide 75,000 square feet of exhibition space and could be converted into a convention hall. He requested first commercial zoning for the area.

He said his clients were attempting to acquire the entire square bounded by I, K, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and New Hampshire avenue northwest for the center. Several nearby property owners voiced objections to the rezoning from the present residential district.

Baxter Wrestles Clinstock Tonight In Stadium Bout

Laverne Baxter, whose mat presence has clouded the atmosphere of Turner's Arena several times during the winter, will be taken out into the pure air of Griffith Stadium tonight for the first time, there to test his talents against Jim Clinstock, a massive Indian with a dampening influence on rassle cut-ups.

BAXTER

It will be one half of a double feature, with Jack Hader and Dr. Dropkick Murphy on the other end, if rains interferes, which happened last week, there will be no postponement, but all bouts will be moved back into the Arena.

Baxter, as most rassle fans know, has been tagged with every nickname applied to the meanies of the game. He's really pretty mean, at least in the ring.

Supporting bouts bring together Kazimirz Symkowski and Jules Strongbow in a special 30-minute scrap, Nanjo Singh and Gene Bowman, and Hank Metheny and Ernie Powers.

McGee Keeps Record Clear With Fifth Victory of Season

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, June 7.—An 11-hit assault on three Brooklyn pitchers brought the St. Louis Cardinals a 7-to-3 victory over the Dodgers tonight for Fiddler Bill McGee's fifth pitching triuph without defeat, 33,299 persons witnessing the game.

The game was played under protest after Johnny Mize hit a drive against the railing of the centerfield stands, where several fans made an effort to grab the ball.

Manager Ray Blades, of the Cardinals, argued it should be a home run and Manager Leo Durocher, of the Dodgers, contended it was a double. The umpires finally ruled it a triple and Mize scored on the next play, Don Gutteridge's single, for St. Louis' final run.

Cece Perplexed By Strange Order From the Boss

TRAVIS

Manager Bucky Harris in the coaching box at third base.

Travis: "What's that?"

Travis: "Do you mean it?"

Travis: "Okay, then."

And very leisurely Travis ambled down the line to the plate on the pitcher's windup and succeeded in getting himself tagged out.

It was Bucky Harris' way of getting the game over with before darkness fell and wiped out the seven runs the Nats scored to beat the Indians in the ninth inning.

7-Run Rally In 9th Inning Wins Finale

Team Has Difficulty Getting Out When Darkness Threatens; 2 Homers for Esty

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 7.—The unpredictable Nats won two battles with the Cleveland Indians today, and one with nightfall in a weird ninth inning scene that found the Nats finally attempting to get themselves out before darkness nullified their lead.

They licked the Indians, 10 to 4, and 13 to 9, but that second game will live in the memory of Cleveland fans as a horrible debacle, and will be treasured by Bucky Harris as a gallant come from-behind struggle by his Nats.

With the matchlights of cigarette smokers flickering in the gathering dusk of 7:15 p. m., and lightning crackling overhead the Nats went into the ninth inning of the second game trailing 9 to 6, and wondering if Umpire in Chief Geisel would permit the game to continue.

Travis "Steals" Self Out

He did, and then, with two out the Nats proceeded to pack seven runs into the inning, wipe out the Indians' lead in a grand splatter of hits and win the ball game.

But with the seven runs across the plate in the ninth, and the Nats enjoying a four-run lead, Manager Bucky Harris demonstrated his fear that the game would be called by deliberately ordering Cecil Travis to go home from third base on the pitcher's wind up. Travis, who never stole home in his life, merely ambled down the line and succeeded in getting himself tagged out by Catcher Frankie Pytlak.

Travis had opened the ninth inning with a hit over Pitcher Johnny Humphries' head, but when Buddy Myer took a third strike, there was no indication the Nats would get the four runs necessary to tie the score. Sammy West drew a walk, but the Nats' hopes sagged again when Rick Ferrell flied to centerfield for the second out.

But from that point, there were a succession of heroics by the Nats.

Up to Lewis

Pinch-hitter Jimmy Bloodworth, who joined the Nats from Springfield only today, whaled a long drive against the rightfield fence that scored Travis. George Case, with his speed afoot, beat out a hit that Webb fumbled momentarily, and West scored. Case stole second to put the tying run on that bag and Bobby Estalella drew a walk from Humphries that filled the bases.

All of which put the issue up to Buddy Lewis, who worked the count to three and two and then banged out a single, that Grimes knocked down but couldn't throw. It trickled into rightfield and scored Welaj, running for Bloodworth, and Case with the runs that gave the Nats a 10-9 lead.

Taft Wright drew a walk to fill the bases again, and then up stepped Travis with his second hit of the inning—a slashing triple into the leftfield corner and three more runs clattered across the plate.

Then it was that, fearful dark-

Breese-Adair Doubles Team Eliminated in City Net Play

Ritzenberg, Askin Score, 4-6, 6-4, 8-6

Lynch and Johnsen Beat Shore, Smith, 6-2, 14-16, 7-5; Singles on Today

By Jack Munhall.

The third-seeded team of Bill Breese and Ralph (Buddy) Adair was eliminated in a thrilling upset and the fourth-seeded combination of Hugh Lynch and Davie Johnsen came within a hair of suffering a similar setback yesterday in quarter-final matches of the City of Washington tournament at Edgemoor Club.

It was an afternoon long to be remembered in local tennis, for it produced some of the finest doubles and certainly some of the most exciting competition seen here in recent years. Breese and Adair were defeated, 4—6, 6—4, 8—6, by Nathan Askin and Allie Ritzenberg after holding a third set lead of five games to four and 30-love on Breese's serve.

Lynch and Johnsen won their match from unseeded Frank Shore and Alphonso Smith, 6—2, 14—16, 7—5, after dissipating a 4-0 advantage in the third set. The 16—14 set was believed to be the second longest ever held in the District. In the semifinal singles round of the 1937 Middle Atlantic championships Lieut. John McCue defeated Dooly Mitchell, 19—17, in the third set, for what is thought to be the record.

Meet Difficulty

Speaking of Mitchell, the curly-haired account professor and his partner, Ralph McElvenny, defending champions, figured in the third match yesterday and even this stellar duo had its troubles before turning back unseeded Ed Mather and Dick Murphy, 6—1, 2—6, 6—3.

For Buddy Adair and the gigantic Breese their loss to Askin and Ritzenberg was a cruel blow, for as late as the sixth game of that third set they were as much of a sure thing as exists in tennis.

After meeting with stubborn opposition in the first two sets Breese and Adair, a pair of husky lads who hit a tennis ball with the speed of a rifle bullet, apparently had worn down their foes preparatory to an easy victory. With Adair storming the net to score placement after placement and Breese roving the back court with winged feet and unerring hand, they built up a 5—1 lead and were at set match point when Askin and Ritzenberg started their astonishing comeback.

Heroic Rally

As quickly as you can imagine the whole complexion of the match was changed. Ritzenberg and Askin, who carried the University of Maryland's colors to triumph in the Southern Conference tournament last month, were as cool and confident as if they were on the long end of the score as they set about to deadlock the set at 5—5.

After the collegians had won four straight games, meanwhile fighting off a second match point in the eighth, Breese and Adair stemmed the rush with a love game victory on the former's service.

This 6—5 lead, however, disappeared just as rapidly as had the 5—1 advantage for Ritzenberg and Askin had enough left to take the final two deciding games and climax one of the greatest uphill doubles battles in City of Washington tournament history.

The fourth doubles semifinalist will be determined Friday afternoon at 3:30, when the second-seeded Lieuts. Jim Farrin and Bill Howard meet Tom Moorhead and Charlie Sturtevant.

Today's schedule consists of semifinal singles matches which may produce as many fireworks as did yesterday's doubles.

Doubles

QUARTER-FINAL ROUND—Hugh Lynch and Davis Johnsen defeated Frank Shore and Alphonso Smith, 6—2, 14—16, 7—5; Nathan Askin and Allie Ritzenberg defeated Buddy Adair and Bill Breese, 4—6, 6—4, 8—6; Dooly Mitchell and Ralph McElvenny defeated Ed Mather and Dick Murphy, 6—1, 2—6, 6—3.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

SEMIFINAL ROUND—4 p. m., Hugh Lynch vs. Ray Stocklinski; Davie Johnsen vs. Buddy Adair; 5 p. m., Lieut. Jim Farrin vs. Tom Moorhead; 5:30 p. m.—Neil Lindjem vs. Alphonso Smith.

Richardson, Cowan Score in Jr. Doubles

Fighting off a game comeback by the losers who overcame a 5-1 deficit to square the second set at 5-5, Maurice Cowan and Eddie Richardson yesterday defeated Davie Kay and Al Freer, 6—3, 12—10, 6—3, to win the City of Washington Junior doubles tournament.

The straight set victory by the unseeded combination earned them the chance to represent this city in the national interscholastic tournament at Culver later this summer.

Riggs Favored In French Hard Court Tourney

U. S. Amateur Seeded 1st in International Tennis Field of 64

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 7—Bobby Riggs, setting out on the tennis trail blazed last year by Don Budge, is heavy favorite to win his first European title in the French hard courts singles championship starting tomorrow.

The 21-year-old No. 1 American amateur is seeded first in a strong international field of 64. Riggs, who has been working out here since Friday, will meet Roland Journu, of France, in the first match tomorrow and may have trouble. Journu recently beat Christian Boussus, veteran French Davis Cup player.

Other seeded players are Ferenc Puncec, of Yugoslavia, No. 2; Yvon Petra, of France, No. 3, and Ottar Szigetti, of Hungary, No. 4.

The field is much the same as Budge conquered last year to start his grand slam in the French, English and United States championships and the Davis Cup before turning professional. The only notable absentees are the Germans.

The other American entries are Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg.; Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City; Charles Harris, of Palm Beach, Fla., and Bill Robertson, of California.

John Cobb to Seek New Speed Record

Salt Lake City, June 7 (U.P.)—The Bonneville Racing Association announced today that John Cobb, burly English fur broker, will sail from London August 4 to try for a new land speed record in his 3½-ton Railton car of Utah's famed Bonneville Salt Flats "some time after August 15."

Last summer, Cobb and Capt. George E. T. Eyston staged a thrilling duel on the Salt Flats—a duel that saw the record change hands twice and increase from 311.42 to 357.2 miles per hour in less than three weeks.

Cowboy Scott to Box Angott in Louisville

Louisville, Ky., June 7 (AP).—Matchmaker Vernon Franklin said today Sammy Angott, of Louisville, high-ranking contender for the lightweight championship, had signed to meet "Cowboy" Howard Scott, of Washington, in a ten-round bout here June 19.

ness would beat the Nats out of a victory, Harris ordered Travis to amble home and get himself put out, which happened.

Pete Appleton, the Nats' fourth pitcher of the game, was entrusted with that four-run lead in the ninth and beyond wielding a single to Keltner suffered no other damage.

Alexandra Batted Out

The Nats' ninth inning surge saved Alex Alexandra from being charged with a defeat. The Venezuelan, lacking effectiveness, was batted out of the box in the third inning after yielding seven hits and six runs to the Indians, who wiped out Washington's 2-0 lead.

Off Harry Kelley they picked up another run in the fifth and two more in the seventh to take a 9-4 lead, Buddy Lewis having hit a homer over the rightfield wall for the Nats in the seventh.

A hit by Rick Ferrell, a two-bagger by George Case and a wild throw by Grimes helped the Nats to cut the Indians' lead to 9-6 in the eighth, to set the stage for the ninth inning uprising.

That first game was a twin triumph for young Joe Haynes and little Bobby Estallela. Haynes held the Indians to seven hits, although six of them were for extra bases, while the Nats pounded Al Milner and two other hurlers for 13 blows.

While Haynes was keeping the Nats in the ball game, Estelalla was winning it with his fourth and fifth home runs of the season—the first a terrific blast over the rightfield fence with Case on base, and the second an even more potent blow into the centerfield bleachers 425 feet distant.

Haynes Does Good Job

Young Haynes did a considerable job of it in that first game, but the Nats were giving him an ample margin of runs to work with. They gave him a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Jake Early followed up a pair of singles by Bloodworth and Bluege after two were out, with a lengthy two-bagger against the rightfield wall.

Campbell's triple off the fence in right and Chapman's double tied the score at 2-2 in the fourth, but in the sixth the Nats went to work for Haynes and staged a five-run splurge with a six-hit attack against Milner.

Haynes himself opened the spree with a single off the wall in right. There was great unexcitment when George Case forced Haynes, but on the next pitch Estalella swatted his first homer of the day over the rightfield wall, a prodigious poke for a right-handed hitter. Runs followed thick and fast after that. Welaj singled and went to third on Chapman's muff. It was the first of four straight hits. Gelbert singled to right to score Welaj and knock Milnar out of the box. Bloodworth greeted Bill Zuber with a double off the wall in right, and Ossie Bluege poked a single past Trosky that ushered Bloodworth and Gelbert home.

Estalella's second homer, into the centerfield bleachers improved the Nats' lead to 8-2 in the next inning, and in the eighth they made it 10-2 with the help of Case's triple to center, a pair of walks issued by Zuber, and Shilling's wild throw to second.

Haynes was jarred out of his smug satisfaction when Chapman led off the ninth with a single and Jeff Heath pumped the ball over the rightfield wall for a homer, but it was the Indians' final gesture, and their rally fell four runs short.

Swift Blanks Bees; Pirates Win, 2 to 0

By International News Service.

Boston, June 7.—Bill Swift today was brilliant in his first start of the season for the Pirates, blanking the Bees with seven hits and helping with his bat, too, in Pittsburgh's 2-to-0 victory.

Chuck Klein, signed by the Pirates this afternoon, after his release by the Phils, contributed a single toward Pittsburgh's first run in the fourth frame. Suhr and Handley also singled to produce the tally. Brubaker singled in the sixth frame and was eventually scored when Swift connected for a one-bagger.

After a first inning threat, the Bees were completely tame. In the opening frame, Outlaw singled, and when Max West doubled, the former was caught going home.

Reds Bunch 8 Hits, Beat Phillies, 5 to 4

Losers Squandeer 13 Hits Off Moore; Lloyd's 7th Victory

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 7.—The league-leading Cincinnati Reds bunched eight hits to good advantage today to win a series opener with the Phillies, 5 to 4.

The Phillies squandered their 13 hits off Lloyd Moore, who won his seventh game against four defeats for the year.

Combining base hits with Al Butcher's wildness, the Reds took a 4 to 0 lead in the first four innings, and then added a fifth off Al Hollingsworth in the fifth inning. After that Ray Harrell and Jennings Poindexter held them hitless.

Although hit hard all the way, Moore kept out of trouble until the sixth when Gil Brack doubled, Morris Arnovich walked, Joe Marty singled and Merrill May doubled for two runs.

In the seventh Brack hit his fifth home run of the season with Hershel Martin on base, but the Phils were unable to overcome the one-run margin in the final innings.

Wit hone out in the ninth, Brack walked. Arnovich doubled to center, but Brack was thrown out at the plate with Ival Goodman and Linus Frey relaying the ball to Ernie Lombardi. Bill Myers tossed out Marty to end the game.

A's Bunch Hits Off 'Schoolboy' as Nelson Holds Detroit Safe

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 7.—Philadelphia's Athletics bunched their hits off Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe today to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 4, in the first contest of a three-game series here.

Lynn Nelson scattered seven Detroit safeties which included Rudy York's fifth home run of the year and Dixie Walker's fourth. Nelson fanned three and issued no bases on balls.

The A's scored twice on a double and two singles in the first inning and were never headed, as they loosed a 14-hit attack on Rowe and Luther Thomas, who succeeded him in the ninth.

Tired After Spree, Giants Lose to Cubs

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 7.—Reaction set in today against the New York Giants after their hitting spree of yesterday and they collected only five safeties off Claude Passeau in losing their series opener to the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 1.

The former Phil, in winning his first game for the Cubs, fanned seven, got two of Chicago's 12 hits and scored twice himself.

The Giants led off in the third with their only run on Burgess Whitehead's triple and Joe Moore's double, but Jimmy Gleeson tied the score for the Cubs with a homer in the fourth and errors helped them to go ahead with two tallies in the fifth and three more in the seventh.

Cliff Melton was relieved in the eighth and charged with his sixth defeat against two victories.

Heffner Offered To Tribe by Browns

Cleveland, June 7 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns have offered Infielder Don Heffner to the Cleveland Indians on a "what-will-you-giv..-for-him" basis, Secretary Frank Kohlbecker, of the Cleveland club, said today.

Kohlbecker said the offer was made in a letter received several days ago, and added the Indians had made no reply yet.

The Indians have long sought Heffner for shortstop or second base, but previous negotiations bogged down.

JEAN SHANKS

Having a very capable tutor right in the family, her husband, little Jean Shanks might be the girl to put feminine softball on Washington's sports map. Oren, veteran of Dr. Pepper, Ehrlich and Dixie Tavern, is teaching her his famous "windmill delivery" and most anything might come of it. Against Bureau of Engraving in the Washington-Virginia League last week, something came of it to the extent that Jean allowed but seven hits against the Capitolettes for an 18-1 victory.

Born in Brooksville, Fla., and boasting 21 summers, Jean lets softball take the place of movies and bridge. Hurled for Park View Playground last year, and has been with the Capitolettes through three straight wins this season. Her greatest softball thrill—"Well, I guess was fanning six hitters in a row in the Engraving game," she says.

Jean and her softball pals in the league play the preliminaries to Metro Night League games at Ballston Stadium. If there is anything the girls like better than a base hit, says Lee Barbash, league president, it's probably something as important as a permanent wave or flattering lipstick. And not even Wes Ferrell could be as self-debasing as the girls when they make an error.

Hufty Leads Chevy Chase Golf Play

Lewis Plays Third Round In Tourney

Most of Entries Complete Second Rounds; 2 Former Champs in Running

The chances of Page Hufty, defending champion, repeating his Chevy Chase Country Club golf championship this year appeared good yesterday when the husky linksman pounded around one 18 of the 72-hole medal play tournament in 74 and followed it up with a 77 in the afternoon. He was one of the last finishers of the day, and his second round was six strokes better than that of A. B. "Bud" Adams, whose first-round equalled Hufty's.

Most of the 11 entries completed their second rounds, but were unable to compete with Hufty's steady, though not brilliant, firing. Reeve Lewis, jr., was the only participant to play his third round, a near-par 73 combining with a pair of 79s for a 231 total.

Two former champions besides Hufty are in the running, though Ralph Quinter, jr., 1937 titlist, has yet to play. Frank B. Reeside, a late finisher yesterday, won the tourney four years ago and had hopes of gaining another championship when he turned in a 77 for the first 18.

Second to Hufty in the midway standings was D. K. Mason, whose 76 was the best second-round effort carded. He had a 153 total, two back of the defending champ, and three better than Fred Hitz, who was in third place.

Chevy Chase Club results:

New York, June 7 (AP).—William W. Hinshaw, Columbia, S. C., Washington, posted a 36-hole score of 180, which, with a handicap of 14, gave him a total of 166 and a tie for sixteenth place in class B play (70-74 years) in the thirty-fifth annual championship of the United States senior golf championship).

Dr. Noah Pomeroy, Congressional, was in a tie for third place with 145 in the 65-69-year-old age group play, and P. S. Ridsdale, Chevy Chase, had a 156 total to end far down the list in the same class.

The second half of the field, approximately 110 golfers, will play tomorrow and Friday, shooting at the scores already posted.

Royal Giants Bow To Belleville, 6-5

Belleville, Va., Grays yesterday scored three runs in the seventh inning to defeat Ben Taylor's Washington Royal Giants in a well-played baseball game at Griffith Stadium, 6 to 5. The game was sponsored by the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church in conjunction with its open air pageant.

After overcoming a 5-to-3 deficit in the seventh, the visitors played outstanding defensive ball to maintain their leadership. Tom Sampson, of the invaders, hit a home run into the leftfield bleachers with one on in the first inning.

Mrs. H. Brundage, Columbia Country Club's ace lady golfer, took a lead on the field for the low gross trophy yesterday as the third round of the W. W. Hinshaw Tournament was staged on the Connecticut avenue links. A steady 83, scored despite an erratic putter and several bad approaches, put Mrs. Brundage in the lead with a 54-hole gross of 277.

Mrs. J. F. Gross went into the lead for the low net award with a total of 246, and Mrs. G. Stratemeyer and Mrs. R. A. Bogley were tied for second with 253. The last round of the tourney, sponsored by Columbia's popular Hinshaw, a former Metropolitan Opera singer, will be held next week.

Mrs. Martin's 7-and-6 Victory Leads Way in Va. Women's Golf

Holder of Four State Titles Takes First Round Easily From Medalist

By the Associated Press.

Virginia Beach, Va., June 7.—Mrs. Lily Harper Martin, slender Portsmouth player, firing the superb golf which gained her four State titles in a row, scored a decisive 7 and 6 first-round decision over Mrs. Fred Evans, Langley Field medalist, as match play began in the eighteenth annual Virginia women's tournament here today.

There were no upsets in the initial elimination round with Miss Lillian Wood, tall Richmonder, who won the championship last year, and other ranking players advancing to tomorrow's quarter-finals without much difficulty.

Mrs. George Owens, Petersburg, medalist in the 1938 tourney and one of the State's most consistent feminine golfers, blazed her way to an 8 and 6 victory over Mrs. J. C. Addington, Norfolk. This top-heavy margin was a surprise, as Mrs. Addington, local favorite, had been playing the densely wooded Princess Anne Country Club course well this spring and was expected to give the experienced Petersburger a closer battle.

Miss Wood, who ended Mrs. Martin's reign at Richmond last year, outstroked Mrs. C. G. Quesenbery, Waynesboro, 3 and 2. Her 39 going out, four over women's par, was the best of the day.

The closest championship flight match saw Mrs. A. H. Beekhuis, Petersburg, gain a 2 and 1 triumph over Mrs. George McAllister, Old Point.

Richmond advanced a second player to the quarter-finals when Mrs. Ora Chancellor bested Mrs. G. S. Hall, Amelia, 4 and 3. Mrs. H. N. Allen, Newport News, who lost to Mrs. Martin in the finals in 1936 and reached the semifinals the following year, was one down to Miss Agnes Birsch, Norfolk, at the turn, but came back with a string of pars which netted her a 3 and 2 win.

The Peninsula sent another representative into tomorrow's round when Mrs. H. P. Wise, Langley Field, Tidewater champion, ousted Mrs. Hunter Watson, Crewe, 5 and 4. Mrs. Neil Wessels, experienced Roanoker, was hitting her shots nicely to eliminate Mrs. David Barnum, Norfolk, 4 and 2.

Detroit Old Timers Win Four-Inning Exhibition, 4 to 3

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 7 (AP).—The years were rolled back at Briggs Stadium this afternoon when the Detroit Old Timers, a team composed of Tiger players of past decades, defeated the Country Old Timers, a suburban aggregation, 4 to 3, in a four-inning exhibition. The tilt preceded the regular Detroit-Philadelphia contest and brought into action such old-time favorites as Sam Crawford, Davey Jones, Marty Kavanaugh and Bobby Veach.

Mike Menoskey, formerly of the Tigers and the Boston Red Sox, broke up the game in the final inning with a double that scored two runs. Crawford, one of the great hitters of his day, who came here from California for the game, failed to get the ball out of the infield in two tries at the plate.

The guest of honor was Connie Mack, veteran leader of the Athletics.

Well, Well, Even First Basemen Have a Racket

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—Leslie O'Connor, secretary to K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, said today the commissioner had written the presidents of both major leagues concerning reports first basemen in both circuits had been violating the rule governing size of their gloves.

The rule specifies that first basemen's gloves may not be more than 12 inches long, from top to bottom, nor more than 8 inches wide across the palm, with thumb and palm connected by leather lacing of not more than 4 inches from thumb to palm.

"Some of the boys," O'Connor remarked dryly, "were building themselves good imitations of lacrosse racquets."

Dun Lucky Wins Baker's Handicap at Charles Town Track

Victor Scores Easily, Pays $4 Mutuel

Jinneal Runs Second, Happy Road Is Third; Short Daily Double Pays Backers $8.80

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.—Capt. Ewart Johnston, from across the mountains in Virginia, added the Progressive Bakers' Handicap to his list of successes at this track when Dun Lucky led virtually all the way and set a new track record of 2.05 3-5 for a mile and a quarter. As hot as a piece of newly made ginger cake, Dun Lucky won by two and a half lengths, much to the delight of the favorite players, who considered the $4 mutuel "money from home."

Mrs. H. W. Wageley's Jinneal was second, two lengths in advance of Mrs. W. Ashbridge's Happy Road, with Its a Maid, holder of the record for the distance before the race, in fourth position.

Jockey A. Vesseli, who won yesterday's feature with Capt. Johnston's Royal Business, had the mount on Dun Lucky and made no mistakes. He took the gelded son of Dunlin to the front in the opening furlong, hugged the corners, shook off a challenge from Jinneal and went on about his business in the stretch. Jinneal appeared to have the race locked up with a quarter to go, but the mare received little help from Jockey Garrett. Happy Road was forwardly placed from the start and hard ridden by Sammy Palumbo, but was held safe in the closing stages.

Fernbrake, a product of Mowlee, Alan Clarke's sire, won her maiden race by 12 lengths under Palumbo's handling.

JINNEAL was well placed from start, moved up on pacemaker, but received little help from rider in closing stages. HAPPY ROAD was placed forwardly throughout and had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:44. Off 5:47. Winner, M. B. Goss' br. g. At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.

Dear Al:

The first of a series of ball games between the different departments here have been arranged for next Tuesday morning on the diamond in the infield. The Stevens concession forces, captained by Joe Stevens, will tackle the turf scribes and telegraph gang. Stevens has named his line-up as follows: Caton, Robertson, Novak, Grove, Glaze, Norris, Johnson Bell and Horlick. Assisted by Pork Chops. I'm going to play centerfield. Pork Chops will do the running for me. G. P. Sherman was an arrival from Pimlico with Custer and Steppin In. Due to three entries being named for tomorrow's 2-year-old race, Race Secretary Fred Burton is allowing ten youngsters to face the barrier. Heretofore only ten horses were allowed to start in stake or handicap races. James Morris has succeeded B. Butterfield as trainer of Mrs. M. T. Morris' Flying Cherokee and Title McGee. By saddling a pair of winners yesterday, C. F. Kent moved into second position in the trainers' race with five winners. M. H. Everhart has succeeded Claude Feltner as trainer of T. Presgrave's horses. When four favorites won yesterday, it boosted the total for the meeting to 58. Don Gallagher, Washington atorney, brought a party of friends over for the day's racing. Sammy Palumbo, leading winning rider at the meeting, boosted his total to 20 by riding one winner yesterday.

BILL.

First race—Miss Maker won her last and seems to be the best juvenile on the grounds. Unless something awakes he looks like the goods. Wale Signal will have Palumbo up and has done about everything asked at this oval. Engles Wonder was kidding the customers last time.

Second race—Wander Bird was all but knocked off her pins last out and then was beaten in a photo finish. With clear sailing, this one should get home. Chiriqui is dropping down several pegs and should go well. Some Groucher to take care of the others.

Third race—Hurdy Gurdy is well down the reserve list but is ready to whip this kind and may get in action. Dolled Up has been racing into condition and may be close up in the pay circle.

Fourth race—Consistent has lived up to that name here-abouts and may add another purse to that growing list in this field. Travelo won at the first asking and is dangerous. Balkanese is better than generally rated.

Fifth race—Scout Rose, looks like the right one in this rather open affair. Breaks off the rail and, with some hustling riding going to the turn, this one may not be headed. Schley Buck is among the "also eligibles" and will be in the thick of contention if in action. Dornoch belongs with this kind.

Sixth race—Caidon has improved much since the start of the meeting and may get up in time to down a field as good as this. Timetta will like the route and is a threat. Enthusiasm may find the route too long but must be considered.

Seventh race—Brown Wren was ridden all over the course by Palumbo the other day. This one is ready to win with the right ride. Cora Kay was used up setting the pace in the last. Pukka Heaven for the show end.

Eighth race—Jimmy D. and Lady Dunlin, both on the reserve list, have a fair chance of seeing action. I believe they will be one, two. Light Action appears best of these horses assured a chance to start.

Sub-race—If this event is used I'll take Dunsany, Rocky Mount, and Sir Warning.

Best bet—Miss Maker.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 7.—Wheat futures gained nearly a cent a bushel today, but best prices were not held and the close was ⅜ off to ⅝ up. Trade was rather light.

Cotton Climbs 45 to 70 Cents A Bale Higher

New York, June 7 (AP).—Rumors of government action affecting the new crop dominated the cotton futures market today. Nervous covering combined with broad foreign and domestic buying to lift final prices 9 to 14 points.

Trade rumors indicated many in the trade saw possibility not only for continuation of the government loan but to maintenance next season of last season's loan price of 8.30 cents a pound. Nervousness over disposition of the agricultural appropriation bill by the joint Senate-House conference committee laid the foundation for additional buying, brokers said.

Ingot Production Decreases in May

New York, June 7 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute reported today that production of open hearth and Bessemer steel ingots during May totaled, 2,917,876 gross tons compared with 2,986,985 in April and 1,800,877 in May, 1938.

In producing the May tonnage, the steel industry operated at 48.24 per cent of capacity, the lowest this year, compared with 50.99 in April and 30.3 in May, 1938. May's ingot production averaged 658,8o3 gross tons a week, compared with 696,267 tons a week in April and 406,519 a week in May, 1938.

Steel Output Advances to 53% Capacity

Steel Institute Is Requesting Labor Act Revisions

New York, June 7.—Steel ingot production has gained another point to 53 per cent, the highest level since the first week of April, while steel scrap prices again have strengthened, says Iron Age today in its weekly survey of the steel industry.

"Operating increases of 2 points to 51 per cent at Youngstown, 2 points to 35 per cent at Philadelphia, 6 points to 71 per cent at Wheeling, and 5 points to 58 in southern Ohio River plants offset narrow declines at Chicago, Buffalo and in the West, while the important Pittsburgh district operating rate remained unchanged.

"Stronger mill schedules reflect moderate success by producers in driving in specifications on flat rolled steel booked during May 'bargain days.' Except for hot rolled bars, the price situation this week is more settled and a better feeling is replacing disordered conditions of a few weeks ago.

"Perhaps the most important industrial news of the week is a request by the American Iron and Steel Institute, representing steel manufacturers which have signed labor contracts with John L. Lewis, S. W. O. C. and others which have not, for drastic revisions of the Wagner act. In an unanimous appeal for labor act revisions, the steel producers seek to restore free speech to employers, prevent a monopoly by national labor organizations, and block attempts to link the right to work with compulsory payment of union dues.

"While new business in the domestic market is unimpressive (unlike that in England, where pig iron output has been lifted to a new two-year peak and some steel products require as much as four months for delivery), railroad demands for steel shows signs of reviving and the Government shipbuilding program is gaining momentum.

"The largest freight car inquiry to develop in some time is one for 1,100 cars by western Maryland, involving 13,000 tons of steel. At Washington, the Navy Department has awarded contracts for 12 vessels, valued at $107,131,000 to five companies, and also assigned construction of 12 additional ships, including two 45,000-ton battleships, to seven yards.

"Structural steel lettings have declined to 21,900 tons from 35,225 tons the previous week. New structural projects are in small volume at 7,800 tons. This week's reinforcing steel awards stand at 7,800 tons. New reinforcing projects call for 10,500 tons."

Stock Prices Close Irregularly Lower Following Active Opening; Government Bonds Are Easier

New York, June 7.—The stock market turned irregularly lower today after strength in the first hour had carried the composite average up to the high point of the current recovery, reached on May 31. On that day this composite touched an index number of 102.88 and at its best today it stood at 102.87.

But it was unable to break through, thus making this level an important test area. The greatest activity came during the first hour when the list was pointed higher, a total of 170,000 shares changing hands before 11 o'clock out of the day's volume of 530,640 shares. Popularity of the industrials, particularly the blue chips, accounted for the early strength and several of the industrial sections broke through their former recovery highs. The rails were laggard, however. At the close the list had managed to hold 0.05 point of its morning gain.

Telephone Stock Rises

Telephone stood out as an individual feature, closing up 1½ points where it is within 3 points of its high for the year. On the basis of the $9 dividend rates, which was retained throughout the depression, the issue sells to yield 5.4 per cent, which is high for an investment issue in these days of dwindling returns. The explanation, obviously, is the possibility that forced reductions in telephone rates, would make the dividend less secure. Westinghouse was another popular member of the blue chip class, crossing par on a 1¾ points gain.

U. S. Rubber Active

United States Rubber was again the most active stock, moving within a comparatively narrow range and closing off a half. Chrysler and General Motors eased small fractions, as did United States Steel and Bethlehem. Kroger Grocery was a favorite in the store division, while among the utilities Engineers Public Service and United Gas Improvement were the most active.

Business News Cheerful

Better news from the business world has helped keep the stock market in its moderate uptrend. Since the declaration of peace in the coal fields the major indices have displayed some quickening and the automobile business, which had been held back by the strike in the Briggs Manufacturing plants, should make this trend more pronounced now that this strike also has been settled.

Oil Industry Improves

A reduction in gasoline stocks, seasonal to a large extent, has improved the statistical position of the petroleum industry. Power figures announced today showed a decline which reflected the Memorial Day holiday. Output is still running well ahead of a year ago, however. A rise in steel scrap prices, always considered a favorable indication of greater activity in this important industry, has cheered the steel trade and the Iron Age, in its review today, noted greater buying from the railroads.

Chain store sales for May, now being reported, show general improvement. The month appears to have been the best May in two years and June volume thus far is continuing the improvement. Montgomery Ward's sales for the month were the best for any May in its history.

British Move Negligible

The stock market does not appear to have lost much through the action of London brokers in restricting trading in American securities. Their action was taken at the behest of the British government, which wished to discourage the export of British money through investment in our securities. Foreign participation in this market, however, is not as important now as it was during the various recent war scares.

U. S. Bonds Weak

United States Government securities had one of their rare relapses today, but other sections of the listed bonk market were firm. The downturn in Treasury bonds merely took a few thirty-seconds off the record levels and apparently is due in part to the mounting concern about the small yields, and in part to the available offerings of other bonds. High-grade corporate issues were steady, and the tone of speculative bonds was generally favorable to holders. The foreign list had some particularly good spots. Turnover was $6,720,000.

Utilities Advance

Long-term Treasury obligations slipped lower by 1-32 to 10-32 point, in fairly active trading. The list was at highs before the modest recession started, so that the changes of the day are not necessarily of any moment. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations remained dull. Among well-rated utility, railroad and industrial issues changes were mostly upward, and some fresh records were established.

Railroad Liens Gain

Medium-priced railroad bonds had a good market, with gains ranging from small fractions to several points. Some investment money plainly was moving into such securities. Borderline and default carrier issues were idle at former figures. The holding company group was quiet and irregular, but most industrial convertibles improved. Local tractions showed small changes in either direction, but some merchandising bonds improved.

Foreign Bonds Generally Up

Latin-American default bonds were active and higher in the foreign section. Colombian bonds moved to best figures in some years, and good inquiry also was noted for Brazilians and Peruvians. In the European default department German bonds showed best results. Italian, Polish and Japanese bonds were better, where changed. Best grade foreign bonds were idle.

U.S. to Have Ample Power for War Needs, Says Keller

New York, June 7 (AP).—There is little likelihood that a power shortage would develop in the United States at the outbreak of a war in which this country became involved, Gen. Charles Keller told Edison Electric Institute delegates today. Keller is a director of Public Utility Engineering and Service Corporation, Chicago.

Subsequent to the outbreak of the war, he said, actual or threatened shortages would be dealt with, as in 1917, by priorities and by installation of additional capacity as needed. He said it would be "unwise" to attempt to decide the localities in which war shortages of power will occur and to install the indicated additional capacity at those places before we actually are engaged in war."

Harris E. Dexter, vice president, Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., urged utilities to study more carefully the needs of rural dwellers. Rather than attempt to bring about immediate increase in standards of living beyond capacity of consumers to pay for, we recommend that utilities try at first to supplant by electricity existing facilities.

L. W. Baldwin Re-elected

Benefit Checks Offset Loss in Farm Income

Survey Reports U. S. Payments Were Up $30,000,000

New York, June 7.—As in the first quarter, Government benefit payments in April were much larger than a year ago, amounting to $90,000,000 this year as against $60,000,000 last year, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

This increase in benefit payments more than offset the drop in income from marketings although by only a small amount. The farmers' total income in April amounted to $553,000,000 this year as against $548,000,000 last year.

In addition to this slightly larger income, the farmers benefited from a reduction in prices for goods which they bought. As a result, the index of the farmers' purchasing power, on the basis of 1929 as 100, was 80.7 in April this year as against 76.9 in the same month last year.

During the first four months, the farmers' total income amounted to $2,240,000,000 this year as against $2,227,000,000 last year, an increase which was due entirely to the sharp increase in the Government's benefit payments. Total benefit payments during the first four months amounted to $282,000,000 this year as against $168,000,000 last year. The index of the farmers' purchasing power during the first four months rose from 77.7 last year to 81.8 this year.

S. H. Kress Sales In May 4.8% Over Year Ago

New York, June 7 (AP).—S. H. Kress Co. today reported May sales of $6,818,056, a gain of 4.8 per cent over $6,506,672 in May last year. Cumulative turnover for the first five months of the year amounted to $29,319,404, or 1.4 per cent less than $29,747,804 in the comparable 1938 period. The company sells low-priced merchandise through a Nation-wide chain of stores.

Columbia Pictures Corp.

New York, June 7.—Columbia Pictures Corporation today reported net loss for the nine months ended April 1 of $80,159 after all charges. This compared with net income of $438,268, equal to 81 cents a share on common stock, in the nine-month period ended March 26, 1938.

Associated Gas Income

Ithaca, N. Y., June 7 (AP).—Operating revenues of Associated Gas & Electric Co. and subsidiaries should amount to about $135,000,000 during 1939 if the present rate of improvement continues, S. J. Magee, vice president and general manager, said today at the annual meeting of stockholders.

Magee said revenues for the 12 months ended April totaled $131,242,640, compared with $129,320,366 for the year 1938.

Penney Sales Gain

New York, June 7.—J. C. Penney Co. reported May sales of $22,233,020, a jump of 17.9 per cent over $18,853,992 in May a year ago. Sales in the first five months of the year of $93,420,274 were 9.9 per cent ahead of $84,974,118 in the similar 1938 period.

Cuba to Impose Extra Import Tax

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that Cuba had imposed an extra tax of 1 cent per package or unit of merchandise imported into Cuba.

The tax, in addition to the regular customs duties, is for the benefit of Cuba's Civil Retirement Fund. The measure was passed by the Cuban Congress over the veto of the Cuban President, officials said.

Business Index Advances for Week

New York, June 7 (AP).—Time Magazine's index of business conditions, designed to report on underlying factors likely to affect the volume of business, rose sharply last week to 94.6 compared with 92.8 the previous week and 92.0 a year ago.

The increase, which was attributed to an acceleration of spending in trade centers, marked the fifth consecutive rise of the index in as many weeks.

Canada Is Buying American Glassware

European political tension has created new markets for United States manufacturers of pottery and glassware in Canada.

The United States Consulate at Toronto advised the Commerce Department that several Canadian buyers, who formerly dealt with Czecho-Slovakia and other European countries, have purchased United States pottery and glassware in recent weeks for the first time in years.

Czecho-Slovakia, particularly the Sudeten area which was the first part of that country taken over by Germany, was one of the principal foreign suppliers of glassware to Canada and the United States.

Four Hurt When Two Trucks Collide on Richmond Highway

When its driver went to sleep at the wheel, a huge truck roared across the Washington-Richmond highway 12 miles south of Alexandria, Va., and slammed into another truck, State police said. James Britt of Mount Olive, N. C., and S. Durham colored, of the same place, were taken to Alexandria Hospital, Durham unconscious with a possible broken back. R. Goldman, of New Bern, N. C., owner of the other truck, and his driver, were treated at Fort Belvoir Hospital for minor injuries.

Two College Park youths, George Crosby, 20, and Louis Mims, 19, crashed into a tree on the Baltimore boulevard at the University of Maryland. They were brought to Casualty Hospital, Crosby with head injuries and his companion with fractured ribs and a punctured lung.

Bound for Freedmen's Hospital with the victim of a knife fight, the automobile of William Brown, colored, 27, of 1615 Church street northwest, knocked down Hattie W. Edwards, colored, 52, of 1717 U street northwest, as she was crossing Fifteenth and U streets.

The 52-year-old woman and Marie Taylor, 21, of 1641 Thirteenth street northwest, who suffered more than 15 cuts on her face and body, were taken from the scene of the accident to the hospital in the hospital's ambulance.

Hattie Edwards was treated for a broken left leg and right wrist and internal injuries. Police took William Brown in custody pending the outcome of the traffic victim's injuries.

Melvin J. Kingman, 26, of Beltsville, Md., received head injuries when the truck he was riding with crashed into a street car at Beltsville, Md. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Pension Bloc Set to Raise New Deal Ante

Meeting Today Called By Colmer on Plans To Hike U. S. Share

The Administration's social security bill, liberalizing Federal aid in all classes of benefits, last night faced a coalition pension drive to force increased Government contributions for old-age assistance.

A conference of House bi-partisan pension forces was called for this morning by Representative Colmer (Democrat), of Mississippi, who asked that the Government contribute four-fifths of the pension paid in each State, up to a $20 maximum contribution.

Colmer arose in the House to invite both Republicans and Democrats to the conference which he said would consider not only his own plan for increased aid to the States, but other liberalized pension proposals.

Bill Provides Increase

The social security bill reported last week by the Ways and Means Committee and now being debated in the House, already provides for an increase from $15 to $20 a month in the Federal contribution to States that put up similar amounts. This would make possible a maximum $40 pension, on a matching basis with the States.

Colmer charged this was only a "gesture," as only one State (California) now puts up as much as $15 to take advantage of the full Federal contribution. He declared it was unfair for the Federal Government to provide a larger amount to wealthy States able to match the Federal maximum outlay, while denying equal aid to poorer States.

Under his plan, the Government would put up $4 for every $1 advanced by a State, up to a total Federal outlay of $20. Thus a State contributing only $5 could pay $25-a-month pensions, with the Government supplying the $20 balance.

Dempsey Upholds Him

Supporting Colmer, Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, said "all sections" would be represented at today's pension conference, with delegations from the South, the Middle West, the Far West and the Northwest.

Active leaders of the movement were said to include Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi; Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of Massachusetts. Colmer said a "steering committee" will be named today to direct the attempt to amendment the Social Security bill.

The House today will go into its third day of debate on the Ways and Mean's Committee's own social security act amendments, estimated to save employeyrs and workers some $1,700,000,000 in taxes in the next three years and pay in the next five years $1,200,000,000 in added benefits to the aged, to widows and orphans, to dependent women and children and to dependent parents. Chairman Doughton said he expects a final vote on the bill this week, with the House sitting late into Saturday if necessary.

Make Career Of Marriage, Girls Urged

Crosby Addresses 28 At Graduation of Georgetown Convent

The happiest married couples are those who begin life "at the bottom of the financial ladder," John F. Crosby, attorney, declared yesterday in urging 28 graduating students of the Georgetown Convent of the Visitation to make home life their careers.

Crosby added that "life is what one puts into—not gets out of it."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's quiz is based upon questions submitted by readers. The answers which will be found at the end of the column are our own.

Since we believe that there may be more than one correct way of bidding a hand the answers are offered as opinions—nothing more.

Go to it.

1. A question from Miss H. P. asks whether or not South should make a free response to his partner's take-out double. Here are the cards and the bidding:

South
♠ Q 6
♡ 9 7 2
◇ Q J 9 6 2
♣ 9 8 3

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dbl.	2 ♠	?

2. Mrs. R. L. M. has a bet as to what is the best bid with this unusual hand. Both sides are vulnerable and North is dealer. Here is the West hand:

♠ A K J 10 8 5 3 2
♡ K 6
◇ Q J 9
♣ None

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 NT.	?

3. Miss H. L. and her partner had a little difficulty bidding this hand, and she would like to have the matter made clear. North and South are vulnerable; North is dealer. Here are the South cards:

♡ 9 7 5 3
◇ 8 4 2
♣ A 6 5 4

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Dbl.	?	?

4. The hand in the box is submitted by M. W. He and his partner failed to reach a game at spades, and he wants to know whose fault it was. How would you remedy the bidding?

Answers to Questions

1. It is a close question whether South should bid or not, but it is probably better for him to bid and give his partner information concerning his hand than to pass. With one-half to one-plus high-card trick and a five-card suit, a free bid may be made.

2. Mrs. R. L. M. writes that various players she has asked would bid: four spades, three spades, two spades, double, two clubs and pass.

It is far from a cut and dried problem. We would be inclined to pass and await developments. With West's long string of spades, we would not be afraid to wait, coming into the bidding later.

It certainly would be a great thrill to lead eight top spades against the adversary's no trump contract, but it is probably too sanguine a hope that the auction will end there. After the first pass, the action taken on the next rounds would depend entirely upon the opponents' bids. If they were satisfied with a part score at clubs we would certainly jump in with some number of spades.

3. South might either pass or raise to two hearts. No other action seems advisable.

4. M. W. writes: "I sat South and admit that the two no trump bid on my part was quite optimistic, but I was anxious to show my heart stoppers and was afraid to support spades. The main question is should North have bid four diamonds? This bid gave South the impression that North had a weak four-card spade suit and was afraid to mention it again."

South should have bid four spades over four diamonds. South's claim that he passed because he thought North had a four-card spade suit is weak. North bid two suits, spades and clubs, and then supported diamonds, showing an almost perfect picture of his hand. Since he did not support diamonds at once, he must have either 5-4-3-1 or, which is more likely, 5-5-3-0.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Federal employes are still looking to Senator Ellender to champion their individual causes. Letters, embodying their woes and tribulations, still find their way to his office. They call him on the telephone and tell him how they failed to get promoted, how they're old war horses and don't get pay increases.

Ellender listens, and makes notes, but, at the moment, he can't do anything. He is tightly confined in the functionings on the Committee on Education and Labor and can't get around to the civil service hearings that brought him—along with so many Federal chieftains—into the limelight a couple of months ago.

The situation boils down to this: Ellender asked and received an appropriation of $2,500 with which to conduct the hearings on employe grievances and "favoritism" generally in the Federal service. The principal expense has been in the preparing of the stenographic report of the hearings. Ellender personally did a trojan's work on his own time and at no expense to the Government. It was his aim to preserve the appropriation to the last dime's limit.

It was his aim, further, to give a report of the findings, if possible, to the present session of Congress. But whether or not this can be done is uncertain now. It might be wise to carry the hearings over into the next session so that as broad a view as possible can be gotten of the "favoritism" picture. Much of this depends on the appropriation, how long it will last.

The Congress should get the complete picture. Every employe who feels that he has a cause of complaint should have his day before Ellender's tribunal. That is certainly what Ellender desires. But the elements of time and the appropriation enter. And, as was noted here, Ellender is completely tied up in the other committee and may be for some time to come.

It seems too bad that his services could not have been given more consistently to the civil service hearings. These did much good. They served an advantage, certainly, in bringing to light the hidden troubles that so often are lost to sight in the larger and more technical consideration of the Federal field. And Ellender's declaration that he is there to stay until something is done about "favoritism" reassured the minds of hundreds of employes and possibly made many Federal chiefs more cautious in their dealings with the subordinates. It was not a pleasant experience to be called before Ellender—as many found out.

So nothing is certain about the hearings except the Louisiana Senator's determination to remain on duty until a substantial record is acquired. And he may request that his committee be perpetuated until such time as the personnel directors and the council they represent decide upon a general program that will reduce "favoritism" in the service to an unimportant minimum. It is Ellender's determination and the fact that he is there on the job that is doing good—and will continue to be an advantage to employes until the committee is dissolved.

The Treasury Department Recreation Association now is sponsoring baseball, basketball, bowling, golf, hiking, horseback riding, rifle and pistol clubs, softball, swimming, tennis, art club, bridge, camera societies, chess, cruises, dancing, dramatics, first-aid, languages, library, moonlight rides, music, picnics, radio technique, summer camps and tours—all of which is not given here as a mere cataloguing, but rather as a cataloguing to show how Federal employes spend their off-time and how varied are the interests in one department of Government.

New WPA Director

Marinsburg, W. Va., June 7.—Harry H. Hull, until recently of Keyser, W. Va., took charge of WPA district headquarters here yesterday, succeeding Frank L. Downey, transerred to Elkins.

Bob Burns Says—

Pret' near any job would be a lot easier if a person would just think about what he's tryin' to get done instead of moanin' about all the work he's doin'. In that respect, I sometimes think that animals have got it all over us humans. That is, all except the mule. I've never known a mule that wouldn't balk in a traffic jam.

But practically every other animal sticks to its job. Once a pack of hungry wolves chased Grandpa Snazzy up a tree, and waited till sundown for him to come down. Then the leader of the pack stopped lickin' his chops and ran off towards the clearing. It sure made Grandpa feel more comfortable. But it wasn't long 'fore that big wolf came back, draggin' a beaver by the scuff of the neck—to cut that tree down!

Listen to Bob Burns tonight on WRC—between 9 P. M. and 10 P. M.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter II

Jody is the 12-year-old son of Penny and Ma Baxter, who live on an upper reach of the St. Johns River in the north Florida backwoods. Jody wanders in the woods and scrubs at every opportunity. Old Julia is Penny's hound and Rip is the bulldog. All of which is a mere forerunner of the background in one of the grandest and most touching characterizations by any writer in a long time.

Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

The water was only a few inches deep but it ran strongly, with a firm current. The palm-frond mill-wheel must just brush the water's surface. He experimented with depth until he was satisfied, then laid the cherry bar between the twigs. It hung motionless. He twisted it a moment, anxiously, helping it to fit itself into its forked grooves. The bar began to rotate. The current caught the flexible tip of one bit of palm frond. By the time it lifted clear, the rotation of the bar brought the angled tip of the second into contact with the stream. The small leafy paddles swung over and over, up and down. The little wheel was turning. The flutter-mill was at work. It turned with the easy rhythm of the great water-mill at Lynne that ground corn into meal.

Jody drew a deep breath. He threw himself on the weedy sand close to the water and abandoned himself to the magic of motion. Up, over, down, up, over, down—the flutter-mill was enchanting. The bubbling spring would rise forever from the earth, the thin current was endless. The spring was the beginning of waters sliding to the sea. Unless leaves fell, or squirrels cut sweet bay twigs to drop and block the fragile wheel, the flutter-mill might turn forever. When he was an old man, as old as his father, there seemed no reason why this rippling movement might not continue as he had begun it.

He moved a stone that was matching its corners against his sharp ribs and burrowed a little, hollowing himself a nest for his hips and shoulders. He stretched out one arm and laid his head on it. A shaft of sunlight, warm and thin like a light patchwork quilt, lay across his body. He watched the flutter-mill indolently, sunk in the sand and the sunlight. The movement was hypnotic. His eyelids fluttered with the palm-leaf paddles. Drops of silver slipping from the wheel blurred together like the tail of a shooting star. The water made a sound like kittens lapping. A rain frog sang a moment and then was still. There was an instant when the boy hung at the edge of a high bank made of the soft fluff of broomsage, and the rain frog and the starry dripping of the flutter-mill hung with him. Instead of falling over the edge, he sank into the softness. The blue, white-turfted sky closed over him. He slept.

WHEN HE AWAKENED he thought he was in a place other than the branch bed. He was in another world, so that for an instant he thought he might still be dreaming. The sun was gone and all the light and shadow. There were no black boles of live oaks, no glossy green of magnolia, no pattern of gold lace where the sun had sifted through the branches of the wild cherry. The world was all a gentle gray and he lay in a mist as fine as spray from a waterfall. The mist tickled his skin. It was scarcely wet. It was at once warm and cool. He rolled over on his back and it was as though he looked up into the soft gray breast of a mourning dove.

He lay, absorbing the fine-dropped rain like a young plant. When his face was damp at last and his shirt was moist to the touch, he left his nest. He stopped short. A deer had come to the spring while he was sleeping. The fresh tracks came down the east bank and stopped at the water's edge. They were sharp and pointed, the tracks of a doe. They sank deeply into the sand, so that he knew the doe was an old one and a large. Perhaps she was heavy with fawn. She had come down and drunk deeply from the spring, not seeing him where he slept. Then she had scented him. There was a scuffled confusion in the sand where she had wheeled in fright. The tracks up the opposite bank had long, harried streaks behind them. Perhaps she had not drunk, after all, before she scented him, and turned and ran with that swift, sand-throwing flight. He hoped she was not now thirsty, wide-eyed in the scrub.

He looked about for other tracks. The squirrels had raced up and down the banks, but they were bold, always. A raccoon had been that way, with his feet like sharp-nailed hands, but he could not be sure how recently. Only his father could tell for certain the hour when any wild things had passed by. Only the doe had surely come and had been frightened. He turned back again to the flutter-mill. It was turning as steadily as though it had always been there. The palm-leaf paddles were frail, but they made a brave show of strength, rippling against the shallow water. They were glistening from the slow rain.

JODY LOOKED AT THE SKY, and bushes glittered, varnished with He could not tell the time of day in the grayness, nor how long he may have slept. He bounded up the west bank, where open gallberry flats spread without obstructions. As he stood, hesitant whether to go or stay, the rain ended as gently as it had begun. A light breeze stirred from the southwest. The sun came out. The clouds rolled together into great white billowing feather bolsters, and across the east a rainbow arched, so lovely and so various that Jody thought he would burst with looking at it. The earth was pale green, the air itself was all but visible, golden with the rain-washed sunlight, and all the trees and grass the raindrops.

A spring of delight boiled up within him as irresistibly as the spring of the branch. He lifted his arms and held them straight from his shoulders like a water-turkey's wings. He began to whirl around in his tracks. He whirled faster and faster until his ecstasy was a whirlpool, and when he thought he would explode with it, he became dizzy and closed is eyes and dropped to the ground and lay flat in the broomsage. The earth whirled under him and with him. He opened his eyes and the blue April sky and the cotton clouds whirled over him. Boy and earth and trees and sky spun together. The whirling stopped, his head cleared and he got to his feet. He was light-headed and giddy, mut something in him was relieved, and the April day could be borne again, like any ordinary day.

He turned and galloped home. He drew deep breaths of the pines, aromatic with wetness. The loose sand that had pulled at his feet was firmed by the rain. The return was comfortable going. The sun was not far from its setting when the long-leaf pines around the Baxter clearing came into sight. They stood tall and dark against the red-gold west. He heard the chickens clucking and quarreling and knew they had just been fed. He turned into the clearing. The weathered gray of the split-rail fence was luminous in the rich spring light. Smoke curled thickly from the stick-and-clay chimney. Supper would be ready on the hearth and hot bread baking in the Dutch oven. He hoped his father had not returned from Grahamsville. It came to him for the first time that perhaps he should not have left the place while his father was away. If his mother had needed wood, she would be angry. Even his father would shake his head a little and say, "Son——" He heard old Caesar snort and knew his father was ahead of him.

THE CLEARING WAS in a pleasan clatter. The horse whinnied at the gate, the calf bleated in its stall and the milch cow answered; the chickens scratched and cackled and the dogs barked with the coming of food and evening. It was good to be hungry and to be fed and the stock was eager with an expectant certainty. The end of winter had been meager; corn short, and hay, and dried cow-peas. But now in April the pastures were green and succulent and even the chickens savored the sprouts of young grass. The dogs had found a nest of young rabbits that evening, and after such tidbits the scraps from the Baxter supper table were a matter of some indifference. Jody saw old Julia lying under the wagon, worn out from her miles of trotting. He swung open the front paling gate and went to find his father.

Penny Baxter was at the woodpile. He still wore the coat of the broadcloth suit that he had been married in, that he now wore as badge of his gentility when he went to church, or off trading. The sleeves were too short, not because Penny had grown, but because the years of hanging through the summer dampness, and being pressed with the smoothing iron and pressed again, had somehow shrunk the fabric. Jody saw his father's hands, big for the rest of him, close around a bundle of wood. He was doing Jody's work, and in his good coat. Jody ran to him.

"I'll git it, Pa."

He hoped his willingness, now, would cover his delinquency. His father straightened his back.

"I near about give you out, son," he said.

"I went to the Glen."

"Hit were a mighty purty day to go," Penny said. "Or to go anywhere. How come you to take out such a fur piece?"

IT WAS AS HARD TO remember why he had gone as though it had been a year ago. He had to think back to the moment when he had laid down his hoe.

"Oh." He had it now. "I aimed to foller the honey bees and find a bee tree."

"You find it?"

Jody stared blankly.

"Dogged if I ain't forgot 'til now to look for it."

Parking Meter Extension in D. C. Favored

Senate Committee Passes on 12 Other Capital Measures

Authority to extend the use of parking meters throughout downtown Washington would be granted in a bill reported favorably yesterday by the Senate District Committee.

The bill, which makes permanent an experiment officials have found satisfactory, was among 13 pieces of legislation reported by the committee at its second meeting.

After a lively discussion of the local liquor situation and a statement by Chairman King (Democrat), of Utah, that "we have been entirely too generous in granting licenses," a bill which would prohibit the selling of beer to retailers except on a strict cash basis was referred to a sub-committee for additional study.

Also held over was a bill designed to place more stringent regulations on companies writing taxicab insurance.

Auto Bill Reported

The date for annual registration of motor vehicles in the District would be advanced from March 1 to April 1 under provisions of another bill reported after explanation by District and AAA officials that no revenue would be lost thereby and workers living in Virginia and Maryland would be benefited.

Also designed to "fit in" with Maryland laws was the measure reported to amend the code in regard to regulation of building and loan associations in the District. Under the amendment these companies would deposit $50,000 as evidence of their stability rather than 10 per cent of their assets as would be necessary for District companies doing business in Maryland under new laws of that State.

Hospitals would be permitted to enforce liens against insurance collected by accident victims brought to them under provisions of another proposal. Under present laws, it was pointed out, hospitals have to treat all accident cases brought them, but often have no way to force payment.

Other Bills Reported

Other bills reported favorably would amend the real estate act of te District to make it possible to "regulate the sale of cemetery lots," permit the Commissioners more latitude in condemnation proceedings, permit buildings to be erected in Judicial and Municipal squares to "hitch on" to the central heating plant for steam, permit extension of a railroad line to Buzzards Point, amend the adoption laws of the District to permit 90 days for investigation rather than 60, and authorize the widening of Wisconsin avenue through Georgetown.

The committee turned down a bill that would enable the Commissioners to sell and transfer property no longer needed for public purposes, after the National Park and Planning Commission had passed on the transaction, on the ground that it would be "relinquishing legislative authority."

Pilot With Mars As Goal Faces Larceny Trial

Youth Fished From Sea Wears Handcuffs, Not Hero's Wreath

By the Associated Press

Camden, N. J., June 7.—Wearing handcuffs instead of a hero's wreath, Cheston L. Eshelman, 22, of Carlisle, Pa., returned tonight to the airport from which he started his asserted "fligh to Mars" that ended in the Atlantic Ocean, some 44,000,000 miles short of his goal.

The young airplane mechanic was lodged in Camden County Jail four hours later in default of $5,000 bond fixed by Police Recorder George E. Yost, of Pennsauken, on charges of larceny of the airplane and instruments. The warrants were sworn to by John Faries and Edward Walz, officials of the flying school from which Eshelman rented the plane. He dropped it in the Atlantic Ocean off the Georges Banks, and was picked up by a Boston bound fishing schooner.

Walz said the plane was rented to Eshelman only for restricted flights near the Camden airport.

"I guess I missed it a few million miles," grinned Eshelman when he arrived here from Boston, accompanied by a Camden policeman, in a plane piloted by Walz.

The adventurous youth, still wearing a white neckscarf and stained khaki overalls said he didn't have $2,500 to pay for the sunken plane but that he hoped to "find a way to fix it up with Mr. Walz."

He insisted his flight was cut short by a broken gasoline line, which prevented him from pumping reserve gasoline into the main tank.

The young flier said he had enough gasoline for 15,000 miles, and when someone pointed out that that would take him only a fraction of the way to the planet, he merely asserted that it would take him above the gravity pull, enabling him to glide the rest of the way.

Eshelman told police he had carried a pistol because the Martians were "supposed to be tough guys," but that it sank with the plane.

Police said his resources consisted of seven rounds of ammunition, 55 cents in cash, two bars of chocolate and a few sandwiches.

Kritt, a native of Albany, Ga., was discovered by Robert Davis and Freddie Burrghs, of Bladensburg, near the eastern branch, Anacostia River, a half mile from the Peace Cross on Defense highway.
